Gets Desired Platform, McGovern Turns To Naming Running Mate

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Sen. George McGovern, assured of the platform he sought and a first-ballot victory tonight in the Democratic presidential balloting, considered a list of potential running mates today. Aides said he still plans to ask a reluctant Sen. Edward M. Kennedy to join the ticket.

Weary delegates had barely 12 hours off after the longest convention session in the history of either party before tonight's climactic meeting at which McGovern was scheduled to be the first candidate placed into nomination and, when the balloting took place, the party's nominee.

California planned to yield to Connecticut when the states were called for nominations so that Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff could nominate the 49-year-old South Dakota senator to head the Democratic ticket this November.

Speculation turned immediately to possible running mates after the withdrawal of Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey and Edmund S. Muskie on Tuesday assured McGovern's nomination.

Kennedy was clearly his top choice despite repeated statements he is unavailable. The day was marred briefly in late morning when two men were taken into custody outside McGovern's hotel by Secret Service and FBI agents. Two pistols were found in the car.

The men were black and wore jeans. They were seized shortly after McGovern had wound up a session with a group of Democratic governors.

A close personal friend of Kennedy, Sen. John V. Tunney of California, told reporters after talking with him by phone that he thinks it highly unlikely Kennedy would accept. He added he expects Kennedy to fly here from Hyannis Port, Mass., Thursday to appear at the convention with the nominee. McGovern's aides said that others under consideration include: United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock; Sens. Thomas F.

Eagleton of Missouri and Abraham A. Ribicoff of Connecticut and Florida Gov. Reubin Askew.

Alternatives For Revenue Discussed In Charleston

CHARLESTON — Alternatives for securing additional revenue for the city was the main topic of discussion at Tuesday night's City Council meeting as a result of the June 27 defeat of a city sales tax proposal. An ordinance denying water service to businesses over six months' delinquent in payment of occupational licenses will be drawn up by City Attorney W. Clifton Banta, Sr. The council discussed doubling business occupation licenses, but no action was taken. City Manager Richard Martin is to prepare more details and possibly a fee schedule for licenses for presentation at the August meeting. Martin told the council an increase in water rates from $4 to $5 would bring an additional $25,000 per year, and an increase from $1 to $1.25 in sewer rates would provide an additional $6,000 per year. Also discussed was a five-cent per pack cigarette tax which would bring in approximately $15,000 per year. No action on either proposal was taken. Martin informed the council proposed expenditures as set down in the current budget for city departments had been cut by $45,250 this year. Operating

In New Madrid County

Petition For Voter Registration

NEW MADRID — Between four and five hundred signatures have been obtained on a petition seeking voter registration in New Madrid County. The petitions are being circulated countrywide in a non-partisan effort to secure approximately 1,300 signatures necessary to place the issue before the voters in the November general election. Termed non-political, the drive is being made by a group interested in good government, equal representation and a more Democratic form of government in New Madrid County.

The required number of signatures represents about 10 per cent of the number of votes cast in the county for governor in the last general election. The signed petitions will have to be presented to the County Court for approval 30 days before the November general election, in order for it to be voted on at that time.

Any person 18 or over who is a qualified New Madrid County voter may sign the petition. It is not necessary that it be signed in the precinct in which a voter lives.

New Madrid County is one of the few in the state that does not have voter registration. Adjoining counties of Pemiscot, Dunklin, Mississippi, Scott and Stoddard have voter registration.

Nearly $100,000 Monthly

Scott Social Security Raised

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Approximately 6,487 Social Security beneficiaries in Scott County will get a 20 per cent boost in their checks this fall as a result of the increase passed last month by Congress.

The total amount paid monthly as of December 31 was $557,000. Now, because of the boost, there will be nearly a $100,000 monthly increase.

Computation based on 1970 census figures indicates 19.7 per cent of the people in Scott County are eligible for Social Security benefits.

Social Security beneficiaries need not apply for the 20 per cent benefit increase signed into law by President Nixon on July 1. Clifford Forsee, Social Security district manager in Cape Girardeau said today that all social security beneficiaries who are on the benefit rolls in September will receive the increase automatically. The increase is effective beginning the payments for the month of September, payable around the third of October.

The average monthly benefit for a retired worker goes up from $134 to $162; for a retired couple from $224 to about $271. A widowed mother with two children will receive an average social security benefit of about $386, up from $322. For a disabled worker with a wife and one or more children, the new average monthly payment will be about $354, increased from $295.

The special monthly payments that are made to certain individuals age 72 and over who are not insured for regular Social Security case benefits will also be increased by 20 per cent, from $48.30 to $58.00 for an individual and from $72.50 to $87.00 for a couple. The new law also includes a provision for automatic annual increases in social security benefits as the cost of living rises in the future — a recommendation made by President Nixon in his 1969 message on Social Security.

Under the new law the contribution and benefit base — the maximum amount of annual earnings that is counted for benefit and contribution purposes — will rise from the present $9,000 a year to $10,800 in 1973 and to $12,000 in 1974. Thereafter, this amount would be adjusted automatically to keep pace with rising wages.

This means that as earnings rise workers whose earnings are at or above the level of the maximum earnings base will pay contributions on higher earnings — but they also will have those additional earnings counted toward the benefits that will be payable to them and their families in the future.

Propose New School Building To Help Relieve Overcrowding

The R-6 Board of Education was told Tuesday that the best way to relieve overcrowding in the middle and senior high schools is to build a new building for students in the eighth and ninth grades.

The report came from the feasibility study committee headed by Middle School Principal Ernest Ellidge.

The new building is envisioned as a million-dollar structure with 35 classrooms for 900 students. School board members are confident that it can be built without a tax increase. The board now has a million-dollar bonding capacity because the board is retiring a bond issue at the end of this year.

Board members are strongly against raising taxes and decided Tuesday that they must stay within the million-dollar limit, including both the school building and equipment such as desks, chairs and blackboards.

The reason for the new school is to relieve the crush of students in upper grade levels. School officials say the crowding and mixture of the wide range of grades in the buildings create management and psychological problems which impair the student's education. The building will probably be built on land owned by the board south of the senior high school.

To help relieve overcrowding at Lee Hunter school, the board decided to purchase another mobile classroom. One is located at the school already. Superintendent of Schools Sam Harbin told the board that there are no state safety standards for mobile or modular classrooms. However, he said the mobile classroom will be anchored and he will try to have extra doors installed.

Harbin said the students are evacuated from the buildings everytime there is the threat of a severe storm. "We're taking all reasonable precautions to protect the children," he added.

17-Year-Old Can't Vote August 8

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Supreme Court ruled today that a 17-year-old cannot vote in the state's Aug. 8 primary election even if the person will be 18 before the Nov. 7 general election.

The court upheld a decision by Judge Alvin C. Randall of the Jackson County Circuit Court.

conditioners at Matthews school was $4,872 from Sears, Roebuck and Co., Harbin said.

The air-conditioners will be installed by the board's own maintenance staff and the total cost will be $8,750. Harbin said he could not guarantee that the air-conditioners would be installed by the beginning of school, but he was hopeful.

Results of achievement tests taken at the schools last school year were given to the board. Roger Sherman, director of Secondary education, said grades nine and 10 tested above the national average. Grade 11 tested just below the national average and seniors tested just above the lowest one-third in the nation.

Sherman said there are a number of possible explanations, including: Sikeston has a lower drop-out rate than the national average. Many of the students who would normally drop out are taking the tests and pulling the average down. Fifty per cent of all students are enrolled in vocational training programs. Sherman said it is no reflection on vocation training, but these students often do not take English and science courses, subjects which are tested heavily on the achievement tests. He also cited poor attendance records among the seniors and suggested that perhaps they don't take the tests seriously enough.

Elementary grades consistently scored above the national average, Robert Miller, director of elementary education, told the board.

The University of Missouri-St. Louis Office of Student Activities offers a computerized car pool service to assist students in finding rides to and from the campus.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

There are many different ways of going to the devil, but by none of them can you go slowly.

This is going to be a long editorial. We don't think that long editorials are good because most people quit reading before they get too far in them, but in this instance we think that it is imperative that the subscribers of this paper know what is going on concerning the location of the Highway Patrol Headquarters. We remember way back when the Highway Patrol Headquarters were located in Sikeston, Captain Sheppard was in command and he moved the Headquarters on the other side of Poplar Bluff so that he could go home to Doniphan every night, which I guess was alright, but my father disagreed with him and he had it in for Captain Sheppard from then on. We think that now is the time to inform the readers of this paper just exactly why we think that the Headquarters ought to be located, if not in Sikeston, very close to it, because we have the intersection of Interstate 57 and 55 coming together here and they are the highways that are going to carry the traffic in the future and as a matter of fact now, while 55 is completed through our area and 57 is getting on it, we want to call your attention to the map that is in the customary place where the editorial cartoon usually appears.

TROOP E HEADQUARTERS LOCATION

I. Sikeston offers the patrol:

1. A 20 acre headquarter site;
2. Extension of Water, sewer, and electric utilities to site;
3. Convenient airport to accommodate patrol aircraft.

II. The Sikeston Community provides the following for the Headquarters Staff:

1. Adequate stock of housing in a wide range of price;
2. Excellent school system;
3. Outstanding hospital facilities;
4. Opportunity to participate in development of programming for Sikeston Recreation Complex;
5. Attractive and competitive retail shopping facilities;
6. A friendly populace ready to welcome newcomers to the community.

III. The following factors should influence patrol to locate in Sikeston.

1. Proximity to I-55 and I-57 intersection which will make Sikeston increasingly important as a trade and transportation center in the Bootheel;
2. Traffic volumes in excess of those in many other patrol area locations. These volumes will increase significantly with the opening of the completed four lane section of I-55 to St. Louis later this year, the completion of Mississippi River bridges at Caruthersville and Cairo in 1976 and 1978, and the future westerly extension of Route 60 as a four lane divided highway.
3. Quick access to other areas over I-55, I-57 and 60.
4. Sikeston's proximity to the center of population of the patrol area;
5. Availability of Sikeston Airport for patrol use.

IV. Some important statistics.

1. 1970 census figures show Sikeston and Scott County gaining population while Butler County lost people despite a slight increase in Poplar Bluff.
2. Total highway traffic entering and leaving Sikeston now amounts to 68,000 vehicles per day compared to 39,000 vehicles per day at Poplar Bluff.

Of course, we are of the opinion that the politicians don't have anything to do with the Highway Patrol other than appropriate the necessary money for its operation, because the patrol does not pay any attention to the politicians, but we quote also the '50, '60, and '70 census which you can see shows what we ought to be. Now, if there is anything that any of you can do toward letting Col. Hockaday know what you think about locating it here, now is the time to do it because Sikeston is offering the proper location and everything that pertains to it.

Clarence Scott says: Missouri population is near zero growth, but that is one problem people aren't losing much sleep over.

WATER TORCHES

No one knows why the cattail has so many folklore names. The tall stems with chocolate brown heads are called marsh beetles, marsh pestles, bull-seggs, candlewick and great seed mace. Perhaps they are called water torches because in the days when political parades were common, boys dipped the heads in kerosene and used the flaming torches as they marched along village streets.

Pioneers dried the stiff stalks, took out the pith, put in a wick and used the stems for candles. Indians ate the powdered roots in starvation times, and Indian mothers used the down of ripened heads to line the cradle boards. In England, the roots are boiled in early spring and called Cossack asparagus.

The countryman doesn't eat cattails, but he enjoys the picture during the summer as the big patch in the swale lifts its dark heads among the green leaves. The waxy leaves prevent the adhesion of water and clogging of the pores.

It is not a spectacular plant, but few persons know that an eight inch head has about 30,000 seeds and several million fibres. Grandmothers used the autumn-ripened fluff for pillow fillings.

The countryman goes out on a July morning, looks at the cylindrical finger-sized heads, and thinks that he will still enjoy the picture next winter when the wind-torn heads show up above the snow and ice.

Toll Call. In Chicago, two strangers entered the J. & J. Liquor Store, told Owner Joseph Glickin that they were going to use the pay phone, 35 minutes later departed, taking the telephone with them.

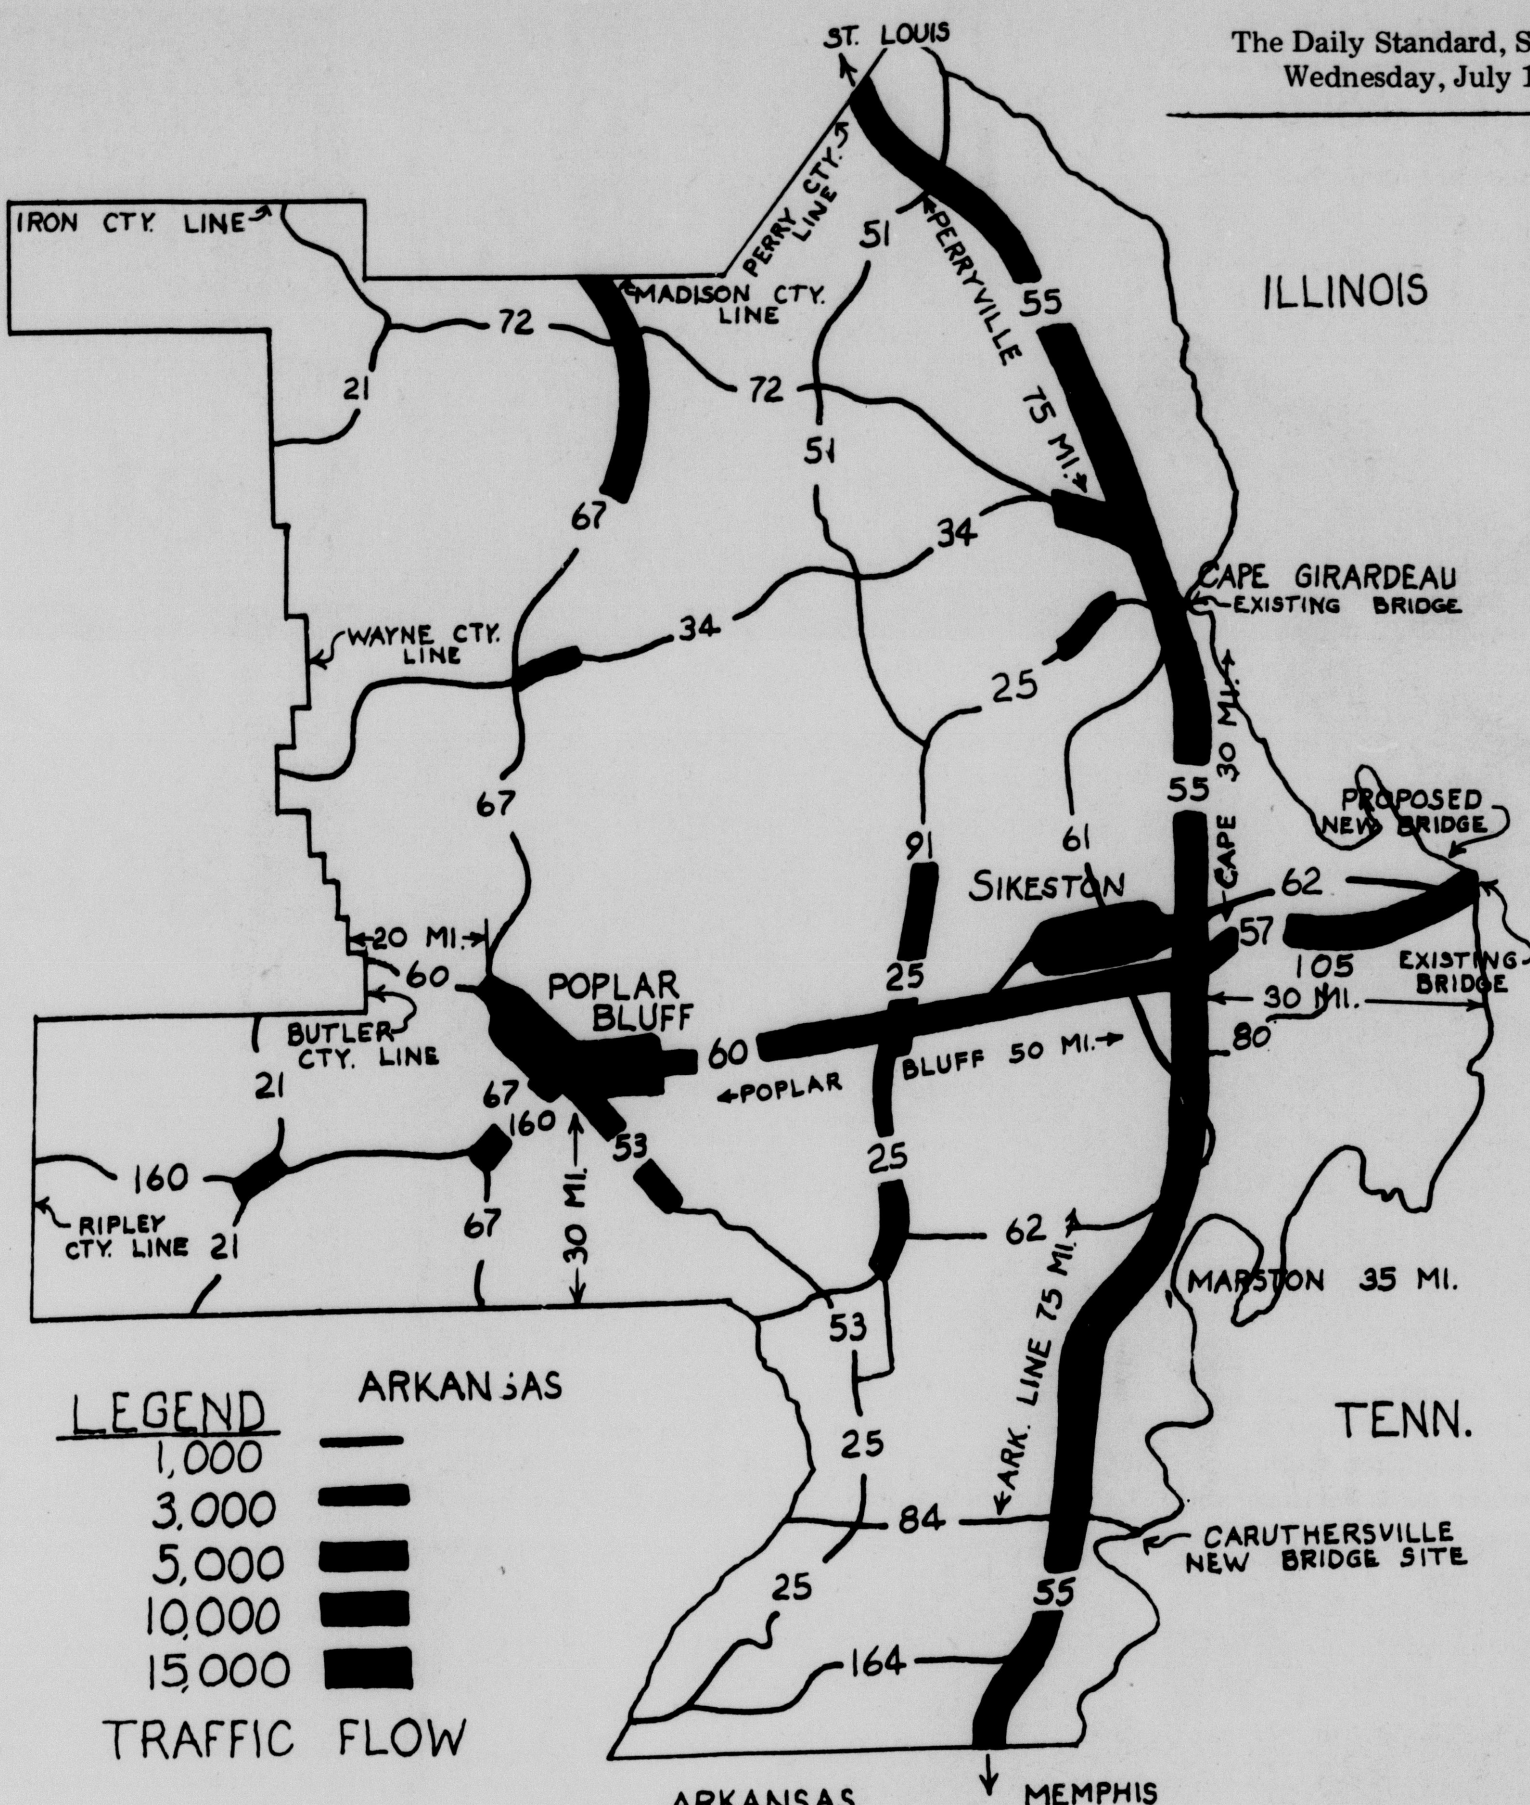

"KLONDIKE OR BUST!"

The first large shipment of gold from the Bonanza Creek area of Canada's Yukon Territory arrived in San Francisco 75 years ago -- on July 14, 1897 -- and the great Klondike Gold Rush was on. More than 30,000 persons, most of them Americans, flocked to the Klondike to make their fortune. Within two years Dawson City grew from a collection of miners' shacks to a boom town of 20,000 inhabitants. About $100 million worth of gold was taken from the placers of Klondike creeks in the peak years (1897-1904) of the boom. But by World War I the gold rush had ended: Dawson City's 1920 population was only 975.

Despite its brevity, the Klondike Gold Rush had long-lasting effects. The unexpected flow of gold from the Yukon, together with increased production from Australia and South Africa, swelled world monetary reserves during a period of severe deflation. The 1896 presidential election in the United States had been fought almost solely on the issue of whether the country should continue to adhere to the gold standard. Democratic presidential nominee William Jennings Bryan contended that only free coinage of silver could bring about inflation. As things turned out, though, it was fresh supplies of gold that raised prices and set in motion the pre-World War I economic boom.

Today, the Klondike is experiencing a different kind of boom. Dawson City was declared a Canadian historic site 10 years ago, and it has been spruced up as a tourist attraction. The Flora Dora Hotel has been renovated, the Sourdough Saloon once again does a thriving business, and Diamond-tooth Gertie's gambling parlor has reopened. For a $1 fee, visitors can try their lick at panning for gold. Although some modest strikes are made in this way, numerous amateur prospectors find nothing but iron pyrite -- fool's gold.

As we have stated many times before, we belly-ache about taxes. We really mean it, but it doesn't do it any good, so we are going to vote for Senator Blackwell, in an effort to have something to say about our increase in taxes at least, and I think that the same thing will happen to the rest of the people that have got all of the taxes that they want. Then after the Governor, we shall vote for the Speaker of the House, Mr. Godfrey, for Lt. Governor. We believe he may not suit you, he may not suit everybody, but we believe that he knows more about what goes on in the legislature than any other candidate for Lt. Governor, therefore, we don't ask anybody else to follow our way of voting, but that is who we are going to vote for in the two top offices. Then, of course, we are going to vote for Jim Spainhower. We believe that the preacher is honest, we don't believe that he is like some of the other candidates, subject to influence, we believe that Spainhower will put the money as it comes in to the state, in the proper banks that will get the state the most returns for their deposits. Then of course, we are going to vote for Bro. Spain for Attorney General, and we think maybe he can win, because we don't believe like everybody else, that Danforth has got what it takes to get all necessary votes of the Democrats, for his next election because he won the first election, lots of Democrats voted for him because they did not have any confidence in the Democratic candidate who had been in there before, but maybe this time they will have some confidence in Bro. Spain, and they will vote the Democratic ticket all the way down the line this time, instead of for the General Election, wavering across the line. Jimmy Kirkpatrick for Secretary of State. I think his plurality in the Primary will be so great that the fellow who is getting his expenses paid from Cape Girardeau to run, will wish that although he wants to know the people in the state he picked the wrong candidate to be against.

"Regrettable," said the spokesman for a small manufacturing firm that has a century-long connection with British education. He was reacting with well-bred disappointment to a decision to ban caning and all other forms of corporal punishment from London's elementary schools. The firm was not altogether a disinterested party to a philosophical dispute over physical punishment, being the supplier of canes, with crook and straight, to British schools. This put it in a position, though on a Lilliputian scale, similar to that of a cement company urging the necessity for more freeways in Los Angeles solely in the public interest.

MR. McNARY SPEAKS OUT

Prosecuting Attorney Gene McNary of St. Louis county was in St. Joseph early last week in the interest of his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Governor. Those who have seen his commercials on television realize that he is a rather forceful 37-year-old man.
In an interview in St. Joseph last week, Mr. McNary made a most interesting comment on the proposed $730 million bond issue. That is the bond issue being promoted by the two major cities, St. Louis and Kansas City.

Mr. McNary's views are all the more interesting in view of the fact that he comes from St. Louis county. St. Louis county is supervised by Lawrence K. Roos, a Republican like McNary, who is leading the way in the fight to get gasoline tax monies for rapid transit.

Here is what Mr. McNary said in his opening remarks on the bond issue. He said he is opposed to "pouring public money down the drain" of the St. Louis transit system. Mr. McNary knows the problems the transit group is having in St. Louis.

This is the organization that is losing money month after month after month. This is the same organization that went before the Missouri legislature and sought — and got — $1,200,000 state monies to keep buses running in St. Louis. It is a hopeless cause.

Mr. McNary stated he was in favor of improving the state's roads and bridges, but that since it is a package deal, the idea of rapid transit being paid for by rural citizens as well as the cities, with a doubt that city people would even use the system, requires considerable study in the future.

This is an interesting view of a man who lives in St. Louis county, right next to Mayor A. J. Cervantes, another of the big leaders who would take gasoline monies to divert the funds for rapid transit.

It will be interesting to watch and see just what many other candidates for state office think about the big bond proposal. Speaker of the House James Godfrey, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor in Missouri, recently said over a Columbia television station that he favors rapid transit. That one statement certainly will not endear Speaker Godfrey with rural citizens of Missouri.

Long ago, the search for a good five-cent cigar ended, and the five-cent subway ride has also passed into limbo. Five-cent candy bars have shrunk until a person needs a microscope to find them. But it is still far too early to lose hope for the value of a penny. A penny, for instance, still buys a lot of electricity, principally because while the price of almost everything has gone up since 1960, the price of electric service has declined.

In the last decade, the cost of living has risen 35 per cent while the price per kilowatt-hour of energy has dropped about 16 per cent -- notwithstanding recent rate increases. In terms of pennies, electricity gives you full value for the price you pay. One power company calculated that two cents worth of electricity will brew 50 cups of coffee or toast 100 slices of bread. power will also wash eight loads of laundry or shave a face every day for two years. As the power company says, "That's getting your two cents worth and more."

Electric power is one place where pennies still count. That is why there is no exaggeration in the oft repeated statement of the nation's investor-owned electric companies that electricity is the biggest bargain in your family budget -- relatively speaking, it will remain so. Low-cost service has been a tradition of the utility industry since Edison put the first power plant "on the line" in New York City a century ago. This tradition has made our country, by far, the largest power-consuming nation on Earth. These are facts that should be remembered as the inevitable day arises when costs of pollution control, inflation and other exigencies must be reflected to some extent in our electric bills.

In 1968, three Amish farmers refused to send their children to a state-run high school because their religious beliefs forbid exposing their children to "worldly" education. The fathers were prosecuted and fined for violation of the Wisconsin state compulsory school attendance laws. Friends of the Amish, representing several religions, came to their aid, and the case eventually reached the U. S. Supreme Court, where the justices unanimously found in favor of the Amish.

In the majority opinion Chief Justice Burger rejected Wisconsin's claim "that its interest in its system of compulsory education is so compelling that even the established religious practices of the Amish must give way."

Mr. Burger declared: "We cannot accept such a sweeping claim."
Those who defended the Amish pointed out that the Amish's private system of education produces results generally far superior to that of state-run schools. No Amish are on welfare, and their crime rate is negligible. In the words of Dr. Donald Erickson, education professor at the University of Chicago, the Amish "learn by doing... they do a better job than most of the rest of us judging by the fact that they have little unemployment, delinquency or divorce." The Amish represent much of what is best in our country. They have preserved the virtues of hard work, close family ties, self-reliance and faith in God. They have won a well-deserved victory. HLH Worried by Hall's reaction, Herman hastily called Strauss in Dallas where the financier was golfing.

"You can play things like golf," said Herman with mock true. "You've got a home." Herman explained this predicament, adding that he had his eyes on Miami Beach.

Strauss replied slyly: "We may have a home, but we don't have any money to pay for it. Let's get together and do some planning."

Strauss was as good as his word. He contacted his friend, Florida Gov. Reubin Askew, who promised to offer Miami Beach police and other support for the Republicans.

With Askew and Strauss behind him, Herman made a crucial presentation to 75 state leaders city leaders in Miami Beach. The Floridians balked but finally gave the go-ahead on May 3.

Three weeks later, Strauss and Herman brought together 40 staff members to coordinate such problems as transportation, rooms, seats, office trailers, TV facilities and the like. After the meeting, as the eyes of old party hacks popped, the Democrats and Republicans threw each other a cocktail party in the hotel's GIGI room.

Herman and Strauss, meanwhile, have been secretly swapping information on what corporations are taking out program ads.

At one point, Strauss, genuinely touched by how they had been able to disagree about politics while they remained friends, told Herman: "The Lord works in strange and pleasing ways."

The planning is over now, but Herman and Strauss are way to Miami Beach to meet determined that their lesson is amity will not be forgotten. The two are proposing a already less than enthusiastic bi-partisan commission to about the Democratic study how cooperation can a convention, fearing a repetition continue in the future to hold of the 1968-style violence. The down the bankrupting costs of last thing they wanted was party conventions.

Reaction Mixed On Eagleton Chances

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Reactions in the Missouri delegation ranged from elation to anger today on reports that the state's junior U.S. senator, Thomas Eagleton, is one of several potential vice presidential running mates under consideration by Sen. George McGovern.

McGovern is expected to claim the Democratic nomination in convention balloting tonight, and likely will name his running mate Thursday.

Eagle said in an interview Tuesday he had been told by McGovern staff members that he, Sen. Phillip Hart of Michigan, and Sen. Gaylor Nelson were under consideration.

Eagleton generally is considered to be among those on most lists trickling out of McGovern headquarters.

"I'd be very flattered and honored," Eagleton said. "But I'm not seeking it. One does not campaign for it."

Eagleton switched his allegiance Tuesday from Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine to McGovern after Muskie withdrew as a candidate.

Eagleton's switch prompted some criticism within the Missouri delegation, and set the stage for a possible heavy Missouri vote tonight for Sen. Henry Jackson in his bid to halt a first-ballot McGovern victory.

Barbara Mueller, 35, Crestwood, who supports McGovern, said she had re-polled the Missouri delegation early today and found 45% votes for Jackson, 21% for McGovern and six undecided.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, who also had supported Muskie, was the first Missouri delegate to sign a petition brought around by a Jackson aide to place Jackson's name in nomination tonight.

"He's still in the race," Hearnes said of Jackson.

Mrs. Mueller said she believes Eagleton "has an excellent chance" to be picked as McGovern's vice presidential running-mate, if the South Dakota senator wins the nomination as expected.

"He's from a borderstate, and he's been a Muskie delegate until today, so that satisfies some of those uncommitteds in our delegation."

Leary Skinner, 31, Kansas City attorney, said he doesn't know what Eagleton's chances are but agreed he would make a good choice.

"I hope he has a good chance," said Skinner. "I think he could do much to help the ticket. He is much qualified."

"His talents compliment those of McGovern. I think they would make a balanced ticket. I think with Eagleton on the ticket McGovern would carry Missouri."

Taking strong exception was John A. DeWitt, Gilmer City, 6th District chairman.

"I think Eagleton has torn his pants for re-election in 1974, I really do," said DeWitt. "My people are pretty conservative, and most of them think he had no business jumping to McGovern because McGovern is going to be taken out."

"Eagleton has ruined his chances for re-election, and he's really torn the party apart in the state. If we have a landslide election for Nixon, Republicans will carry candidates in on his coat-tail."

"My district, as a whole, will not support Eagleton on a bid for re-election."

Jim Farley, Farley, Mo., attorney, said he believes "Tom Eagleton would be an attractive national candidate, but I wouldn't like to see him wasted on a McGovern ticket. It would take a major miracle for him to be elected."

"I hope Tom waits for something better, because he's got a greater future. But it's his decision, of course," said Farley.

Charles Armour, Richmond, said, "I don't think they want him (Eagleton). I think they've got other men who they think are stronger than they want."

Lee McKee, Joplin, said the Missouri delegates weren't talking too much among themselves about Eagleton's chances because "it's pure speculation." He said it would "make the state extremely proud."

Another delegate from Joplin, Kermit Lewis, declared, "I'll believe it when it's announced."

"You know that vice presidency is dangled in front of everybody to induce and seduce. It would be a fine thing for the state if Tom Eagleton is the nominee for vice president."

Gov. Reubin Askew Convention Keynote

Gov. Askew Urges Protest For Change

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Gov. Reubin Askew has called on Democrats to spearhead a coalition of protest for change in America.

"There is indeed a new coalition in this country, a coalition of protest," the Florida governor said Tuesday night in the keynote speech to the Democratic National Convention.

"It includes black and white, young and old, North and South, right and left, some of the rich, most of the poor, and millions of overtaxed and overcharged middle-income Americans as well."

He found the "face of America" in the newly broadened makeup of the convention delegates, and like the nation, he found differences in the party.

The coalition "has the potential to unite Americans and make a difference in this country, but only if it holds together," he said.

"Let us remember that this nation was founded on diversity, that our differences can be a source of strength as well as weakness, that a good and open fight can be a vigorous way of searching for the truth, that while no one person or group possesses the absolute truth, every person and every group has something of value to offer," Askew said.

Holland Dispute Goes On

HOLLAND, Mo. (AP) — There was another election for mayor in this southeast Missouri town Tuesday, but the dispute over who's the winner still goes on.

In an election earlier this year challenger Earl Hawkins, 49, thought he won by one vote. But when the city council recounted the votes it said incumbent William Biggs was the winner by one vote. Hawkins filed a civil suit and a new election was agreed to by both sides.

That election was held Tuesday and Hawkins found himself with 72 votes, two short of Biggs' total. But Hawkins, a service station operator, said he knows of at least 85 persons who voted for him.

Hawkins said he will collect those names on a petition to challenge the outcome of the election.

BERNIE — The City Council passed an ordinance Tuesday night authorizing City Attorney Claud Arnold to file necessary action on all delinquent taxes dating back three years for collection by the city. Mayor R. B. Woods presented Alderman Ray Coats with a certificate designating Coats director of the Bernie Civil Defense Program.

Alderman Willard Adams suggested to council members that two unmarked crossings in the south section of the city be left unmarked. The council members approved the suggestion.

The council agreed with Mayor Woods that the city will not accept or renew the suggested franchise presented by the United Telephone Company, which calls for a rate increase of $2.15 for private lines and a $1 increase for four-party lines.

Terry Howes, representative of C. R. Trotter and Associates, engineering firm of Dexter, presented a water and sewer project proposal to the board for the northwest section of town.

The aldermen passed an ordinance authorizing the Trotter company to submit plans and specifications for the proposal to the Environmental Protection Agency with the provision that, in case of undue delay, the city may withdraw the application.

Mayor Woods informed the council he would work through the fire department toward replacement of Fire Chief Rondell Stanfield who died two weeks ago.

Ann Landers Reader Finds Answer In Alcoholics Anonymous

Dear Ann Landers: A woman I work with lives two blocks from my apartment. For the past three years I have been chaffering her to work. Often she rode home with me, as well. It was no inconvenience because I never had to wait for her. She was always on the curb, rain or shine.

The women is pleasant and I do like her, but she never once said "thank you" either verbally or in any other way, like offering to fill up the tank once in a while, or maybe a small gift at Christmas.

Yesterday my passenger ripped her stocking as she was getting out of the car. There was a rough place on the crome strip. The way she carried on you'd have thought I had put it there on purpose. She yelled for ten minutes about her $3.50 pantyhose and how her leg was scratched, and maybe she should have a lockjaw shot, and ended up with this dig: "It's too bad that some people don't take care of their property."

Finally, I asked, "Do you feel I owe you a pair of stockings?" She replied, "Yes, I do." I then told her that she had been on the receiving end of a few hundred dollars' worth of free transportation and had never expressed any appreciation whatsoever. The next thing I knew we were having a terrific argument. We are no longer on speaking terms and I'm taking another route to work to avoid her.

So please stop advising people to be generous and neighborly, Ann Landers. I've learned it doesn't pay. —Brass Knuckles Beat The Golden Rule

Dear Brass Knuckles: Please don't judge the whole human race by that clod you've been providing with portal to livery service for three years. The fact that she has never expressed her appreciation is evidence that she's a clunker. I still say the golden rule is better than brass knuckles, even when dealing with jerks.

Dear Ann Landers: Several years ago I wrote to you and admitted I was an alcoholic. I asked you to help me. You suggested Alcoholics Anonymous. I wrote back and said I couldn't consider A.A. because I was a member of a very prominent family in town and the loss of dignity would have been too much to bear. You wrote back and asked me if it was more dignified to stagger around at parties dead drunk, getting sick in powder rooms and making no sense to my husband and children after 5:00 p.m. I had to admit you had a point. But I wasn't ready.

I went from psychiatric therapy to transcendental meditation. I tried the prayer route. I experimented with sugar-free diets, yoga and hypnosis. Nothing worked. One morning I woke up and couldn't remember a thing that had happened in the previous 24 hours. It frightened me out of my wits. In desperation I looked up Alcoholics Anonymous in the phone book and went to my first meeting that very night.

I discovered A.A. is a way of life. It brought me back from a world of the dead to a world of the living. I learned hope and faith, kindness and love among those wonderful people. Being one of them made me like myself well enough to want to stay sober.

And to think I used to make fun of your column! I owe you my life. —Sun-Times Reader

Dear Reader: You don't owe me anything. Alcoholics Anonymous did it. But thanks for letting me know.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers' booklet, "Marriage — What To Expect," will prepare you for better or for worse. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Edward Horton

Horton-Alexander

NEW MADRID — In a candlelight ceremony June 30 at 8 p.m. in the Baptist Church, Miss Brenda Kay Alexander of Lilbourn became the bride of Ralph Edward Horton.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Alexander of Lilbourn. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Baz Horton of New Madrid.

The Rev. Jasper Collins of Jackson, Miss., and the Rev. Marion Gipson of Dexter officiated in the double-ring service.

Three urns of yellow gladioli and white daisies placed on white column pedestals were backed by 96 lighted tapers arranged in a tiered candelabra entwined with flowers and greenery and flanked on either side with two spiral candelabras and two seven-branch candelabras. A lighted trinity candle completed the altar setting.

Pew decorations were tinted daisies and baby's breath tied with white satin ribbons.

Nuptial music was provided by Frederick Nolte, organist and pianist, and Mrs. Regina Hamilton, vocalist.

Escorted down the white carpeted aisle by her father, the bride was given in marriage by both of her parents.

The bride chose a gown of imported organza and Venice lace. It featured a fitted basque bodice with high petal neckline. Venice lace set at intervals with light pink Venice lace motifs encircled the neckline and continued around the shoulders giving a yoke effect. The upper part of the shepherds sleeves and wide cuffs were also trimmed with lace. The front of the semi-bouffant skirt had three rows of lace from the waist to the hemline, with the center row highlighted with pink lace motifs. Lace also accented the waistline. The detachable circular chapel-length train, completely bordered with lace, was adorned with three rows of lace at the center back, matching that of the gown.

Her headpiece was a profile of re-embroidered Venice lace flowers. The flowers were centered with crystals, sprinkled with pearls and backed with soft pink ribbon loops. Attached was a three-tiered veil of imported illusion.

Her bridal bouquet was white daisies and pink roses. Miss Diane Ellis of Lilbourn was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Linda Commer, Miss Mary Kathryn Maxwell and Miss Marge Horton, sister of the groom, all of New Madrid, and Miss Debbie Rhodes of Lilbourn.

They wore formal gowns of white flocked voile, underlined with silk taffeta in rainbow hues and white crocheted picture hats with the crown interlaced with ribbon to match their gowns. Their flowers were mixed tinted daisies.

The groom chose Randy Beitel of Mountain View, Wyo., as best man. Groomsmen were James Lynn Brotherton of Kewanee and Eddie Harris, Jimmy Harris and Mark Baker, all of New Madrid. Ushers were Keith Warf of Lilbourn and Calvin Horton of New Madrid.

Kenny Don Thomason of Marston serving as ring bearer and Carol Sue Mowery of LaForge, cousin of the groom, was flower girl. Kevin Warf of Lilbourn and Craig Barbre of New Madrid, cousin of the groom, were candlelighters.

Mrs. Alexander wore an orchid dotted swiss dress and an orchid corsage. Mrs. Horton's dress was turquoise dacon polyester and her flowers were white carnations. Mrs. Goldie Barbre, grandmother of the groom, chose a green double knit dress and wore a white carnation corsage.

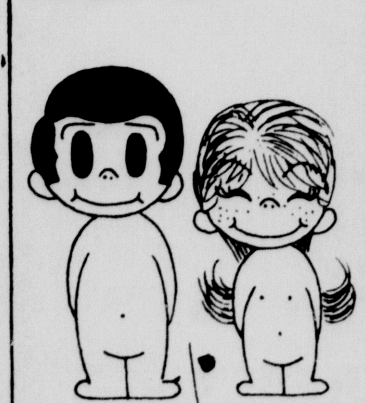

A reception was held following the ceremony in the fellowship hall.

The wedding cake, encircled with daisies and roses, was centered on the serving table and flanked by twin five-branch candelabras with lighted tapers and tinted daisies. Mrs. Rebecca Sharp of New Madrid was in charge of the reception. Miss Chris Ifeast of St. Louis and Miss Pat Collins of Jackson, Miss., served the guests.

Out-of-town guests were the Rev. and Mrs. Jasper Collins and daughter Pat of Jackson, Miss.; the Rev. and Mrs. Marion Gipson of Dexter; Mrs. Ellis Cook and daughter Patty of Houston, Tex.; Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Faucett, Mr. and Mrs. Malvorn Thomason and Mrs. Dorothy Bodine, all of Marston; Michael John Bader of Dexter; Miss Chris Ifeast of St. Louis; and Bruce Long of Cape Girardeau.

The groom is employed at Noranda Aluminum Inc. during the summer. The couple plans to live in Cape Girardeau when Horton resumes his studies in the fall at Southeast Missouri State College.

Foes List 14 Points Against Road Tax Bond

Missourians Against Road Tax Raid amendment contains 14 points which are listed below. The proposed $730-million transportation bond issue would be paid for by a tax on highways.

1. Signing for the proposed bond issue would be a violation of the state constitution which prohibits the state from incurring debt.

2. $225 million of the road tax would be diverted to urban rapid transit lines, which would be a violation of the state constitution which prohibits the state from incurring debt.

3. It is unfair to tax one mode of transportation (highways) for the benefit of competing modes.

4. It would be like taxing restaurants to subsidize cafeterias, or taxing motels to keep hotels in business.

5. It is unfair to tax only one element of the population area of the state. Any diversion of road taxes for non-highway purposes facilities (air terminals and transit lines).

6. Where mass transit and airports are needed in the larger cities they are usually financed from general taxes. Also, there are new federal aid funds for highways -- in 1928, both mass transit and aviation, 1945, 1962 and 1970. Road 7. It is unfair to tax rural funds are similarly safeguarded and small-town Missourians to from diversion in the assist St. Louis and Kansas City. Agriculture, the Several other states allocate all road taxes for roads by statute.

8. The proposed road fund functions.

9. This proposition is based on an unfair principle of License Divisions and make taxation. The number of miles substantial allocations to a man must drive, or the several other state government horsepower of his car, should be taken into consideration. There is no not be measures of his ethical reason why they should responsibility for rapid transit now be asked to support or airports.

10. The proposed road fund functions.

11. Motor fuel taxes and the motor vehicle fees are special initiative petitions and later support the amendment, if it should get on the ballot.

12. Deficiencies in the Missouri highway and street improvement program for the year 2007 -- more than $1,433,000,000.

13. Missourians have voted four times for the constitutional protection of highway funds -- in 1928, both mass transit and aviation, 1945, 1962 and 1970. Road 7. It is unfair to tax rural funds are similarly safeguarded and small-town Missourians to from diversion in the assist St. Louis and Kansas City. Agriculture, the Several other states allocate all road taxes for roads by statute.

14. Motor vehicle owners are now very heavily taxed. They provide the cost of the state highway and freeway systems without subsidy. Also, they support the Missouri Highway Department. There is no not be measures of his ethical reason why they should responsibility for rapid transit now be asked to support or airports.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Some Information

On Postage Stamp Sizes

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY--I am afraid philatelists would not agree with Mrs. C. R. who objects to the size and subject matter of the many commemorative stamps. For her information, regular-issue stamps (like eight-cent Eisenhower and flag ones) are always available at the post office in sheets, booklets and coils. They are the convenient size Mrs. C. R. prefers.

I believe the commemoratives more than pay their way in the number of sheets or plate blocks that are purchased to be preserved unused. Postage rates do go up, as do prices for other services, but so that our postal employees may receive a decent wage.--RUTH

DEAR READERS--I do hope this clears the air a bit concerning commemorative stamps. On checking Ruth's statement that she believed they paid their own way, I learned from a knowledgeable post office official that they do indeed make a profit. However he stressed the fact they were not just made for the profit and the satisfaction of collectors but have educational value as they teach or inspire the seeking of knowledge concerning our history by children and others and are also great U.S. informational tools when sent abroad on letters as they portray pride in our own history.--POLLY

DEAR POLLY--When I combed my little girl's hair into pigtails the yarn or ribbon bow always slipped off until I finally found the solution. Now I make several turns with a rubber band around the end of the pigtail, slip the ribbon through the last loop and then tie in a bow as usual.--MARY LOU

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY--Will mothballs put in my china cabinet keep the silver shiny and pretty? I heard this someplace and wonder if the silver would be safe for using without first being washed.--MRS. R. S.

DEAR POLLY--My Pet Peeve is with the manufacturers of thermos bottles. It seems to me that they could come up with one that had a large mouth and sold at a reasonable price so we could take leftovers to work for lunch and have them stay warm until lunch time.--LYDIA

Patterson Endorses Dowd And Schramm

CARUTHERSVILLE -- few and surpassed by no one." State Sen. J. F. (Pat) Patterson, president pro tem of the Missouri Senate who recently announced his withdrawal from the current senatorial race, has announced his endorsement of Edward Dowd and Jack J. Schramm for governor and lieutenant governor.

Patterson, who endorsed his former opponent, Sen. Nelson B. Tinnin, when he withdrew recently from the race for senator of Missouri's newly created 25th District, made his endorsements by referring to both men as the "finest" candidates in their fields.

In a statement announcing his endorsement of Dowd, Patterson said, "the crucial test for the Democratic party in Missouri is whether it can produce candidates whose past record, experience and programs show them to be forward looking men, genuinely concerned with the well being and prosperity of all Missourians rather than the advancement of a select circle of political allies."

"Ed Dowd's commitment to all the people of Missouri, is a total commitment. His background in the FBI, as a prosecuting attorney and as head of a major law enforcement agency is characterized by performance which has established a level of excellence in positions of major public trust equalled by

Sen. Patterson, a Caruthersville Democrat, is the former chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee. Patterson's support of Dowd and Schramm is expected to carry weight in the Bootheel counties among Democrats who are perturbed by the apparent struggle for power of the New Madrid County Democrats, who earlier announced their support for Lt. Gov. William Morris for governor and James Godfrey as lieutenant governor.

LEXINGTON, Mo. -- This historic old town, a major stop on the old Santa Fe trail and point of departure for wagon trains headed westward, will observe the 150th anniversary of its founding with a week-long sesquicentennial celebration the week of July 9 through 15.

A major feature of the week's activities will include a spectacle-pageant, with over 300 local participants, depicting highlights in the town's early history, to be presented five nights of the celebration.

A highlight of the pageant will be a recreation of the three-day Battle of Lexington in September of 1861.

A major historic spot of interest expected to attract thousands of visitors during the week-long observance is the Lafayette County Courthouse erected in 1847 and modernized and enlarged in 1939.

The courthouse, the third building to serve as the seat of government since Lafayette County was established, is the oldest courthouse still in use in Missouri.

Also expected to be a favorite attraction for visitors is the Anderson house, now a part of the Civil War Battle of Lexington State Park, which was used as a hospital by both Union and Confederate forces during that Civil War Battle. This antebellum home, built in 1853 by Col. Oliver Anderson, sits on the edge of the preserved battlefield atop a bluff overlooking the Missouri River.

Another point of interest in history buffs is the present home of the Lexington Elks Lodge, erected originally to house the Fifth Branch of the Bank of the State of Missouri, chartered April 10, 1845. It was from this bank that state funds amounting to nearly a million dollars were seized by Union forces in 1861, shortly before the battle of Lexington.

The money was buried on the Masonic College grounds here and recovered by Gen. Sterling Price after the surrender of Col. James A. Mulligan, commander of the Union forces, on Sept. 20, 1861.

The victorious confederate forces moved on westward after the Lexington battle, only to suffer later defeat in the battle of Westport Landing in what is now Kansas City, Mo.

Other highlights of the week will include a queen contest and coronation ball, a Pioneer Statehood Day and a Youth Day.

TV Computers Trailing in Early Returns; Or: One Vote for Election Night Suspense

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD—(NEA)—Every election year, I get mad at computers. The other three years, I can take them or leave them alone, but in election years I wish their memory banks would get a short in their forget-me-nots.

Elections used to be exciting affairs. You'd sit up all night, keeping track of the state returns as they trickled in. You'd never know for sure what was going to happen. But now the computers figure it all out so early in the evening that you can even get a good night's sleep, and you go to bed vaguely dissatisfied with the whole process.

So I suggested to CBS' Bill Leonard and NBC's Frank McGee that it would be nice and in the public interest if the networks voluntarily gave up computerized election returns.

They laughed at me.

"No way," said McGee.

And Leonard even got a little annoyed at the suggestion, especially when I said that it would be more fun if the computers were honorably retired.

"We're not in the business of giving viewers fun," he said. "Our job is to give the news, calmly and clearly, without attempting to make it entertainment. The faster we can give the results, the better we've done our job."

So it looks like we're stuck with the computers again for this year's conventions and election. And once more there will be about as much suspense on election night as there is in an episode of Here's Lucy.

Actually, to be fair about it, I think that Leonard, who is CBS News' senior vice-president, has a good point when he says TV news shouldn't be in the entertainment business. The problem is that many of his colleagues don't seem to share his position.

There are a lot of TV newscasters who appear to consider themselves comics first, journalists second. And, unfortunately, many TV news programs are designed so that the most photogenic items they have are put on first, regardless of their news value.

Leonard says that the TV coverage of this year's conventions—the Democratic one in July, the Republicans late in August—will be different from those in previous years, although the viewers may not notice that difference.

He says CBS has had to cut the size of its convention staff down about 15 or 20 per cent, because of the high cost of convention coverage.

"The '68 convention," he says, "cost us about twice as much to cover as the '64 convention, and this one would have cost twice as much again. We had to stop somewhere. The costs of everything have gone up—not only personnel, but building and equipment and everything—and it just got too expensive."

He says they began experimenting in '68 and found they could do the same job with fewer people.

"We don't need to leave four cameras in a candidate's suite," he said. "We can leave one camera and, if we need to, rush one or two mobile units there in a hurry."

All the networks begin working on election night coverage the day after the previous national election. It's the biggest thing on a network's news agenda.

"Election night," Leonard says, "is the most important event for a network news department. If I ever had to make a choice between giving up something, giving up coverage of the primaries or the convention or election night, I'd stick with election night."

Omer Becker, 21 years old, of Portageville, died late Thursday at St. Francis Hospital, Cape Girardeau, of injuries sustained Monday while employed with a wheat threshing crew near his home.

Fire believed to have been caused by spontaneous combustion in rags left in a second floor hallway of the Jefferson Hotel threatened the structure here Saturday.

Firemen at first, were at a loss to find the blaze in the smoke-filled hotel, succeeding finally with the aid of gas masks. The thick, choking fumes originated from fire located on the second floor in a wall between a hall-way and bedroom.

King May Resume Campaign

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) - State Rep. R.J. King says he may resume limited campaigning for the Republican nomination for governor.

The long-time leader of the Republican minority in the Missouri House told a Springfield television station today he hopes to be able to announce later this week that he has paid off the $16,000 debt which he built up on the campaign trail.

King broke off active campaigning several weeks ago with the announcement that he had run out of money. The insurance man from Clayton did not withdraw from the race, however. His announcement apparently left it a contest between State Auditor Christopher Bond and Gene Mc Nary, prosecuting attorney of St. Louis county.

King said that if he isn't elected governor he will never run for public office again.

He also said he does not know of any defections from his campaign organization to other camps. King said he had not talked to Tom Easterly, formerly his state youth director who now is working for Mc Nary.

The Court rules provide that a judge is disqualified while a disciplinary recommendation is pending against him.

The commission recommended that the court reprimand Bardgett for socializing in a cocktail lounge last February with state House Speaker James E. Godfrey, D-St. Louis, while a case involving Godfrey was pending before the court.

Bardgett sat in on arguments in a case challenging the residency qualifications of certain state house members. The commission absolved Bardgett of charges that he was intoxicated and that he cursed another representative while in the cocktail lounge with Godfrey.

Bardgett on Thursday waived his right to challenge the commission's finding and said he would run for re-election.

The commission did not recommend that Bardgett be permanently disqualified from the court.

Thomas Simon, Supreme Court clerk, said decisions for the month will be announced Monday.

RIVERTOWN
by Janet Louise Roberts
(Avon V2438/$.75
224 pp.)

Two factions come between Sarah and the young man she loves in RIVERTOWN, Avon's new original gothic. The young man leads one group; Sarah's father heads another. When two graves are wantonly disturbed, the tension between the two groups threatens to explode, with Sarah caught in the middle.

One evening when Sarah goes out to meet the young man, she hears his voice call to her from behind a ruined cabin. And then, a bullet whistles over her head.

ADVISE AND CONSENT
by Allen Drury
(Avon J132/$1.50
768 pp.)

ADVISE AND CONSENT, the Pulitzer Prize-winning novel by Allen Drury, author of THE THRONE OF SATURN, is a fictional interpretation of dissension in the Senate over a president's nomination of a controversial figure to a high government post. A SHADE OF DIFFERENCE, Drury's second novel of political intrigue, will also be published by Avon Books.

The Senate must advise and consent to major presidential appointments and in recent days, the Senate has declined to approve some of the names brought before it. ADVISE AND CONSENT depicts the hunger for power in a dramatic confrontation between the conservative and the liberal wings, between the new and the old breeds of politicians.

HIGH IRON
by Todhunter Ballard
(Avon S445/60c

In Lonigan, the Pacific Northern Railroad had hired the toughest gun around to wipe out the gang that held up their trains. When the Silk Express carrying $1,000,000 pounded down the tracks into the gun's sights, Lonigan got set for the bloodiest battle of his life.

Carving Is Full Time Job For Ky. Man

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Homer Ledford carves musical instruments. Mountain banjos, mandolins, dulcimers, guitars, an occasional violin. In a workshop adjoining his Kentucky home, he shapes with razor-sharp knives and skilled fingers.

He bought his first guitar at Sears, Roebuck and Co. when he was 10. A few years later he carved his own, and he's been carving ever since. His love and skill for the art developed through high school and college, and through a 10-year teaching stint which he finally gave up. Now he carves full time, still not enough to fill orders for his instruments.

He has finished more than 2,400 dulcimers in the past several years. A dulcimer looks like a guitar without the neck. His early ones sold for $20. Now they range up to $150.

What's The Law? Reporter Sees All, Tells All

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

The Reverend Daniel was son conservative he still preached against the modern dress of women even though there wasn't enough left to talk about. On the other hand, he was very local to his parishioners.

Consequently, when one of this choir singers obtained a featured job in a night club, he decided to go see her sing even though he knew that night clubbing by a spiritual leader off his church was highly frowned upon.

And, when the Reverend Daniel attended the performance, he didn't go alone. Sitting next to him in the back of the night club was the devil. Or, more specifically, it was a newspaper columnist who reported the minister's night club attendance the next morning in the paper. Upon seeing the story, the Reverend Daniel sued the newspaper for defamation of character.

"The reporter wasn't just a columnist," protested the minister, "he was a fifth columnist. With the hundreds of people in the night club, he didn't mention their names. Obviously, he was making a public attack upon my integrity."

"Nonsense," retorted the columnist, "I only mentioned his name because he was a man of the cloth. When a clergyman goes to a night club to see one of his choir girls sing, that's news."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE? would you make the newspaper pay for reporting the Reverend Daniel's presence in a night club?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that there was no evidence that the story was an attack on the minister's integrity. Obviously, noted the judge, it was a warm human interest story of how a minister went to a night club to hear a member of his choir sing. It was of general interest and, in the absence of showing malice or damages, was a story the newspaper was free to print. (Based upon a 1971 New York Supreme Court, A.D., Decision)

Developers Exempt From Line Costs

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) - Developers would not have to pay for burial of telephone lines in subdivisions, the Missouri Public Service Commission ruled today.

The order sets the general criteria for undergrounding lines in subdivision. Comments on the new rules will be accepted until Oct. 10, Commission Chairman Marvin E. Jones said.

"Such a general order is needed," Jones said, "to provide for the orderly uniform transition from overhead to underground location of telephone lines."

He said guidelines issued earlier for underground power lines at subdivisions "appear to be working well."

The second phase is burial of lines for distributing systems in high density commercial areas, such as shopping centers.

The third phase will include burial of all new electric lines below 34.5 kilovolts that were not considered in the first two phases.

A fourth phase will involve conversion of existing overhead electrical distribution systems of less than 34.5 kilovolts to underground placement.

Under the proposed order exempting developers from paying for burial of telephone lines in subdivisions, the developer would have to pay in advance if the lines were not used for at least two years.

The developer would have to pay in "special circumstances," Jones said. When there is a dispute, either the utility or the developer could ask the commission for a ruling.

Bardgett Review Begins

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) - Missouri Supreme Court judges have begun reviewing a 900-page report from the state Judicial Investigating Commission, which recommended last week that Supreme Court Judge John E. Bardgett be reprimanded.

The Court rules provide that a judge is disqualified while a disciplinary recommendation is pending against him.

The commission recommended that the court reprimand Bardgett for socializing in a cocktail lounge last February with state House Speaker James E. Godfrey, D-St. Louis, while a case involving Godfrey was pending before the court.

Bardgett sat in on arguments in a case challenging the residency qualifications of certain state house members. The commission absolved Bardgett of charges that he was intoxicated and that he cursed another representative while in the cocktail lounge with Godfrey.

Bardgett on Thursday waived his right to challenge the commission's finding and said he would run for re-election.

The commission did not recommend that Bardgett be permanently disqualified from the court.

Thomas Simon, Supreme Court clerk, said decisions for the month will be announced Monday.

Chief Justice James Finch Jr., said he didn't know when Bardgett's case might be decided.

The liquor by the drink ordinance was adopted. The ordinance states only three licenses will be issued at a cost of $450 each and each establishment must operate a restaurant serving three meals per day at least six days per week and must have a seating capacity of at least 100 in an unenclosed condition.

An ordinance approving the Alcorn and Crader Addition was passed as was an ordinance giving the Missouri Conservation Commission a drainage easement for Big Lake.

A request from Mrs. Mary Johnson for the city to vacate a 40 by 156-foot portion of Sherman street, a dead end street, was granted. Manager Martin told the council the new city hall was complete inside with the exception of lighting fixtures and air conditioning hookups. A final coat of paint in the fire department and landscaping will complete the work. It is hoped the building will be open by July 31.

Work at the industrial park is on schedule and should be completed by January of 1973.

A public hearing on the See-More Cable TV franchise will be held at 7:30 p.m. July 18 at city hall.

Court Finds

Wolfe Guilty

George Wolfe, 322 Luther Street, was found guilty Tuesday afternoon of disturbing the peace in a trial in Magistrate Court.

He was charged in June after taking a girl suffering from a drug overdose to Missouri Delta Community Hospital. The girl reportedly began screaming and Wolfe tried to force the doctors away from her. They then forced him out of the emergency room with the aid of two highway patrolmen who were at the hospital investigating an accident.

The girl then screamed again and Wolfe burst back into the room. The two patrolmen had to subdue him with force and take him to jail.

Wolfe will be sentenced Aug. 15.

What Happened?

The old adage ... "Third Time's Charm" ... failed to come true for 12-year-old Roger Cloud in the annual Pitch, Hit and Throw competition sponsored by Phillips 66 and Major League Baseball.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Cloud of 834 East Kathleen.

Roger, who has been knocking at the door of the national contest finals since he was 10 years old had his dream of attending this year's All-Star Game and competition in the national finals thwarted in the local eliminations when he placed a dismal fourth.

"I don't know what happened," was the answer the young athlete gave in response to the question which has confronted him since his disappointing try.

No other athlete in the United States had repeated as local, district and division winner two years in a row until Roger turned the trick last year. Each time he failed to accumulate enough points to qualify for the national final at the All-Star Game.

It was almost considered a sure bet that Cloud would finally reach the nationals in this his final season of competition. But, as the youth athlete, who plays for the National League's first place Jaycee team in the Sikeston Little League Points are scored in each category on distance and accuracy. Cloud was reportedly in a slump for the Jaycees at the time of the competition and even Joe Torre has trouble doing his best under such pressure.

But the polite, well-mannered future major league prospect still has a bedroom full of trophies and two uniforms for his previous performances and still can boast of being one in a million ... as the young star was last season when he won back-to-back division championships.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Gil Garrido had played in only 18 Atlanta Braves games this season, yet proved ready when called on Tuesday night.

The 31-year-old Panamanian, filling in for injured second baseman Felix Millan, singled and streaked home on a wild pitch to send the Braves past the St. Louis Cardinals 5-4 in a 15-inning marathon.

"I was ready for anything, just anything to win the game," said Garrido, who rifled a single to center leading off the final inning against Lowell Palmer, 0-1.

It was the first hit but fourth time aboard for the 5-foot-8 infielder, who raced to second as Palmer wild pitched against Braves winner George Stone, 3-6.

Garrido then galloped to third after Mike Lum lifted a lengthy fly ball to the wall in left-center and remained there as Braves rookie star Dusty Baker took a called third strike.

Palmer worked the count to 1-2 on rookie Oscar Brown of the Braves, but Garrido made it home comfortably as the Cards' sixth pitcher of the game uncorked his second wild pitch.

"You've got to be ready for what comes your way," said Garrido, who walked three times. "You start

Bass Named Pros Coach

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Chicago sports baron Charles O. Finley during the weekend named Bob Bass as coach of the Memphis American Basketball Association franchise, officially acquired Thursday by Finley.

Bass, 43, is the former coach of the ABA Floridians of Miami, now disbanded by the league, and is the man who convinced Finley to purchase the financially troubled Memphis team.

Finley's naming Saturday of Bass to the coaching slot was not unexpected. Bass has been mentioned again and again in past weeks as the probable coach or general manager for Memphis.

The two men met earlier this year when Bass was attempting to save the Floridians from doom. Finley would not go along with that idea, but he and Bass later talked millionaire Finley into acquiring the Memphis Pros.

Bass has been in coaching for over two decades on the high school, collegiate and professional level. The past season with the Floridians was his only losing one - a 36-52 record.

Overall, Bass has a 545-340 record in his 22-year stint as a coach.

getting tired in games this long, and everybody begins swinging for the fence."

"He's a valuable piece of property to have on our club," said Braves manager Luman Harris in respect to Garrido, a regular shortstop in 1969 and '70.

"He's a lot like the Cardinals' Dal Maxvill. You tend to forget he's there and then he'll get a hit off you and beat you. He's a good, steady ball player, and he's got his pension that way."

Until the Garrido heroics, Hank Aaron's 658th career homer and giveaway runs by the Braves in the second and seventh innings held center stage.

Hammering Henry drilled an Al Santorini slider over the left field wall with Sonny Jackson and Baker aboard to establish a 4-3 Braves lead in the top of the seventh.

But catcher Earl Williams threw wildly as the Cards' Lou Brock stole second in the bottom of the inning and St. Louis tied at 4-4.

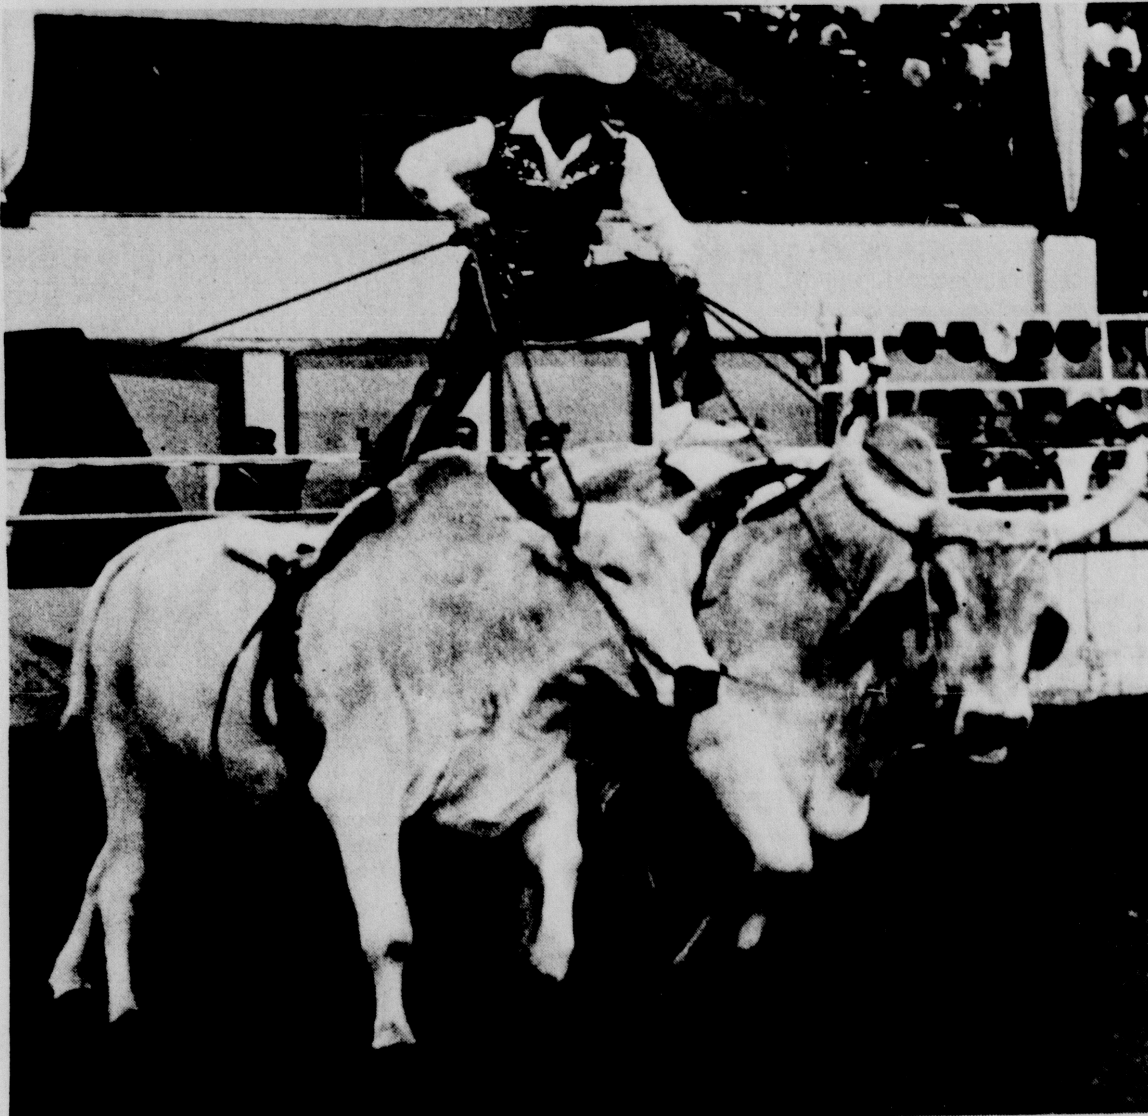

An earlier run had been given the Cards in the second when Williams, thinking he held Jose Cruz' third strike for sufficient duration, lobbed the ball on the ground toward the mound.

Cruz sped to second on what was ruled a passed ball, took third on a Phil Niekro wild pitch and scored as Aaron dropped Darrell Evans' throw to first on a Maxvill grounder.

Aaron, whose 19th homer of the season was his fifth against the Cards, was walked twice intentionally and three times unintentionally.

He couldn't recall the equal to the total in 19 major league seasons but added plaintively, "I think I'd just as soon take my chances with strikes."

LEON ADAMS will ride two Brahma Bulls at one time as part of the 20th annual Sikeston Jaycee Bootheel Rodeo specialty act. This is the only act of its kind in rodeo and the Jaycees have tried for five straight years to get this unusual act for Sikeston area Rodeo fans.

Cepeda's Knee Hurt

OAKLAND (AP) — Orlando Cepeda acquired by the Oakland Athletics in a trade with Atlanta June 29, entered Merritt Hospital Monday for knee surgery.

The 34-year-old first baseman was scheduled to have the operation this morning, a hospital spokesman said. The Puerto Rico native who won the National League's Most Valuable Player award in 1967, also had a knee operation last year.

He has been used only three times as a pinch hitter since joining the A's and has no hits. When he was traded, Cepeda had hit four home runs and batted in nine runs for Atlanta and was right on the .298 batting average he compiled over 14 seasons.

Celtics Sold

NEW YORK (AP) — The Chicago Bulls were without a home court today, while the Boston Celtics, Atlantic Division champions of the National Basketball Association, had only their second sole owner in their 26-year history.

The Bulls have played the last five seasons in Chicago Stadium, after playing in the Chicago Amphitheatre in 1966-67, their first season in the league.

At present, they have no lease for next season for either arena.

They could play in the Amphitheatre, which holds about 10,500 for basketball, if the league's Board of Governors reconsiders a $5.0 million offer to purchase the club by a nine-man group from Milwaukee and Chicago, headed by Marvin L. Fishman, a Milwaukee realtor.

The Board rejected Tuesday the Fishman group offer to buy the Bulls from Elmer Rich.

NBA Commissioner Walter Kennedy indicated that the Governors did not approve the offer because the Bulls were unable to obtain a lease for the Stadium.

Tuesday, Fishman said his group had signed a three-year lease with the Amphitheatre.

Spiezio To White Sox

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago White Sox will play out the season without their slugging third baseman, Bill Melton. But over the weekend, the team obtained a reserve third sacker from the San Diego Padres.

Melton, who led the American League with 33 home runs last year, will undergo surgery within the next seven to 10 days and will be lost to the club for the season, the team announced Saturday.

He is suffering from a herniated disc, a back problem that's kept him out of the lineup since June 23.

The Sox acquired Ed Spiezio, 30, a reserve third baseman for the San Diego Padres. Spiezio, a Joliet, Ill. native, joined the club Sunday, playing in both games of the doubleheader with Detroit. The Sox gave the Padres an undisclosed amount of cash and rights to a player to be named later.

Sports Briefs

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — The New York Raiders of the National Hockey League have announced the signing of center-right wing Jamie Kennedy and the appointment of Fraser Gleeson as head trainer.

Kennedy, a brother of former NHL forward Forbes Kennedy, has scored between 40 and 50 goals in each of the last four seasons for the Jersey Devils of the Eastern Hockey League. Gleeson has been a trainer in the Central Hockey League for the past nine years.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Jockey Jerry Lambert has suffered a broken collarbone in a motorcycle accident, and doctors said Tuesday he may be sidelined two months.

Lambert last month, suffered the injury to his right clavicle Sunday night at Hollywood Park, a track spokesman said. Doctors said X rays showed the break to be a serious one.

One of the most fearsome meteorological phenomena in man's experience, the tornado usually strikes with little warning and frequently devastating results. This photo sequence taken near Gruver, Tex., shows the swift development of a typical twister from a low-hanging cloud . . . formation of a tail . . . then a funnel . . . and, finally, a full-blown classic tornado sweeping across the prairie. MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The number of women more than one million — If you're watching the accredited for the 1972 Democratic National Convention on television and notice a delegate who's clamoring for recognition but not getting it, don't blame the chairman.

They represent 39.7 per cent of the 3,202 delegates, a record high percentage.

Eighty-eight per cent are attending a national convention for the first time. More than 40 per cent are under 35 years of age and 15 per cent are under 25.

Among the youngest is Luedean Spears of Hamilton, Ala., a June high school graduate.

Among the oldest is Helen Nute, 74-year-old retired school teacher from North Conway, N.H., and 73-year-old great-grandmother Sadie Gorbet of Crescent City, Calif.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The National Education Association has urged the Democratic National Convention to include in its education plank a call for the federal government to pay one-third of the nation's total school bill by 1976.

The NEA, comprised of

This local and state support, said the NEA, "varies considerably," and it is the federal government's responsibility to guarantee "equal access to high quality educational services."

Presently, the federal government pays only 7 per cent of the public school cost with state governments contributing 52 per cent and local communities 41 per cent, the NEA said in a statement.

20% SOCIAL SECURITY INCREASE PASSED

Last week, in an action of deep significance to 27 million Americans, the United States Senate voted to provide a 20 per cent increase in Social Security benefits.

As one of the original cosponsors of the measure I was delighted to see the lopsided nature of the vote. The increase passed 82-4, after an Administration-sponsored attempt to hold the increase to only 10 per cent was defeated by a vote of 66-20.

Passage of the increase was a truly major victory for the older Americans on the Social Security rolls. Their greatest problem, faced day by day, week in and week out, every month of the year, is inadequate income.

More than 4.7 million older Americans — one out of every four — live on incomes below the official poverty line. A total of 6.5 million are classified as poor or near-poor.

As measured by the Bureau of Labor Statistics' intermediate budget for a retired couple, which is $4,776, an even greater proportion of the elderly have inadequate incomes.

A Real Difference

Social Security benefits are the major source of income for most retired persons, and the only source of income for many.

Anything short of a 20 per cent increase would not be a satisfactory response to the needs of 27 million Social Security recipients who see their incomes continually eaten up by rising food prices, increased property taxes, and the inflated cost of medical care.

What the average Social Security recipient desperately needs is not a few extra dollars at the beginning of each month but an increase in income that will make a real difference in his or her monthly budget for food, shelter, clothing, medical care — the essentials of life.

Average Couple

With the 20 per cent increase the benefit for the average retired worker would be increased by about $25 per month, and the monthly benefit for the typical retired couple would be increased by about $50.

Approximately 1.9 million Social Security recipients, including 1.4 million aged, would be lifted above the poverty line.

I was pleased that the Senate passed measure included the provision for cost-of-living adjustments. This is a concept I have urged since coming to the Senate in 1969.

It will assure that whenever the cost of living increases by as much as 3 per cent, and Congress fails to provide a benefit increase, a cost-of-living adjustment will be made automatically.

Other Improvements

Later this summer we will consider many other important improvements in the Social Security System, including an unreduce benefits for those who delay retirement beyond 65, and an increase in the earnings limitation.

These changes, combined with the benefit increase we are considering today, will represent a significant improvement in the adequacy of Social Security benefits.

If the House accepts the 20 per cent increase and the President signs the bill into law before July 10, Social Security recipients will begin to get the additional amount with checks received in October.

Faculty Changes At SeMo Announced

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Dr. Robert W. Foster, assistant to the president of Southeast Missouri State College since 1967, has been named by the board of regents as dean of graduate studies, effective with the fall semester.

Dr. Foster, who will continue as a part-time assistant to President Mark F. Scully, succeeds Dr. James Drickey, who requested to return to full-time teaching.

The board also appointed two other department heads and endorsed the request of Dr. Robert Kuster to return to full-time teaching and be relieved of duties as head of the biology department. No successor to Dr. Kuster was selected.

Jake Wells, a member of the art department faculty since 1960, was chosen to succeed Miss Helen Bedford as head of the department Miss Bedford, a member of the Southeast Missouri State faculty since 1925, announced several months ago that she was giving up her administrative duties but would remain as a full-time teacher.

Dr. Albert VanAlphen was made permanent head of the foreign language department. A member of the faculty since 1968, he has served as acting department head for the past year.

In other personnel matters, the board approved the promotion of eight faculty members to associate professor and the promotion of 10 others to assistant professor. Nineteen new faculty members were hired, all of them replacements for instructors who have either resigned or will be on leaves of absence during the coming academic year.

Dr. Foster came to Southeast Missouri State after earning his Ed. D. in administration and supervision at the University of Missouri-Columbia. His master's degree is also from Missouri while he earned his bachelor of science in education at Southwest Missouri State College in Springfield.

An Air Force veteran, he taught nine years in the public schools with his last position being in Jefferson City where he was instructor of speech, debate, and dramatics.

Dr. Foster and his wife, Wilma, are the parents of three children, Allen, 16, Anne, 14, and Joseph, 13. The family resides at 1834 Weisinger.

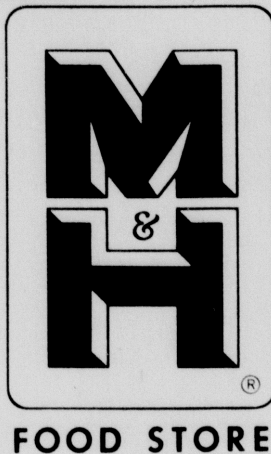

Dr. Drickey has been on the faculty of Southeast Missouri State since 1956, the same year he earned his Ph. D. in psychology and education at the University of Denver. His master's and bachelor's degrees are also from Denver.

Prior to coming to Cape Girardeau, the Nebraska native was an information and education officer at Fitzsimons Army Hospital in Denver and an instructor of education at Mankato State College in Minnesota.

He became coordinator of graduate studies on the campus in 1957 when the college first began offering master's level work in cooperation with the University of Missouri. In 1966 the college introduced its own master's degree program, and Dr. Drickey became director. The title was changed to dean in 1969.

A clinical psychologist, Dr. Drickey is active in the Cape County Association for Retarded Children and the Cape County Mental Health Association.

Corner On Questions

QUESTION: SHOULD THE JEWS BE BLAMED FOR THE CRUCIFIXION OF JESUS?

ANSWER: According to the Baptist Bible Tribune, June 9, 1972, Rabbi Marc Tanenbaum, American Jewish Committee, reported that a famous evangelist told his Charlotte crusade audience that they should not blame the Jews for the crucifixion of Jesus; however, when addressing the "men of Israel" in Acts 2:23, the apostle Peter declared: "Whom (Jesus Christ) ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain." Furthermore, before his stoning, Stephen accused Jews about Jesus saying: "Of whom ye have been now betrayers and murders."

Whenever men contradict God's Word, wise men give God the benefit of the doubt. Scripture confirms: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." Further more, the Lord insists: "Let God be true and every man a liar."

The term "Jew" commonly involves ALL Israelites and ALL did not participate in Christ's actual crucifixion; therefore, only those who did are literally guilty of the act. To say without qualification, nevertheless, that Jews are innocent is false because Jews did participate in Jesus' actual crucifixion. Furthermore, the modern Jew who supports and defends Jesus' crucifixion is as guilty in his heart as the man who merely looks lustfully on a woman is, before God, guilty of adultery in his heart. When the modern "heart" is guilty like those of yesterday, the generation to which one belongs matters little.

While the Jews did in fact demand it, it was Gentile soldiers who nailed Jesus to the cross! Therefore, "who knew no sin," "to be sin for us" (who are dead in sin), "that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him." Because the whole world is guilty, God's promise: "The blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin," is available to everyone; therefore, REPENT!

MU Seeks Patent On Stronger Dental Filling

COLUMBIA — You may soon be making fewer trips to your dentist, thanks to an interdisciplinary effort by two campuses of the four-campus University of Missouri.

A team of engineers and dentists has developed a method of mixing dental amalgams (silver fillings) that should make them at least 30 per cent stronger. The university has just filed a patent application on the new process, although details are not being released until the patent is finalized.

The research and testing were conducted by Dr. David A. Hansen, a physical metallurgist in the Columbia campus College of Engineering, and Dr. David L. Moore, a faculty member in the Kansas City campus School of Dentistry.

These researchers proved experimentally that they could increase the tensile strength and fracture resistance of present amalgams simply by reducing the time they are exposed to various impurities in the air, including moisture.

If you're an average American, your teeth presently have about 55 amalgam fillings. Even though present amalgams have a tensile strength of about 2,500 to 7,500 pounds per square inch, you can reasonably expect that almost a third of these fillings will have to be replaced. Most of these failures will be the result of biting down on something unexpectedly hard.

Right now, U.S. dentists are filling about 200 million cavities a year.

"According to some surveys we made a few years ago," said Dr. Jack L. Stewart, associate dean of the School of Dentistry, University of Missouri-Kansas City, "up to 40 per cent of a dentist's time is occupied in replacing defective restorations — with amalgams, of course making a major contribution. So we anticipate that if we can prolong the life span of these amalgams, we will be able to reduce the dentist's work load to the point where he can direct more of his effort toward the prevention and restoration of newly formed cavities."

Dr. Hansen adds that after this initial research, the team plans to go on to the development of high-strength amalgams. "And eventually," the engineer said, "we would like to design instrumentation that will minimize any contamination of the amalgam during its transfer by the dentist to the patient's tooth."

Until the patenting and licensing of the new dental amalgam mixing technique has been completed, however, the 112 million Americans with their 616 million fracture-prone amalgam fillings will just have to wait.

Bancshares Reports Increase

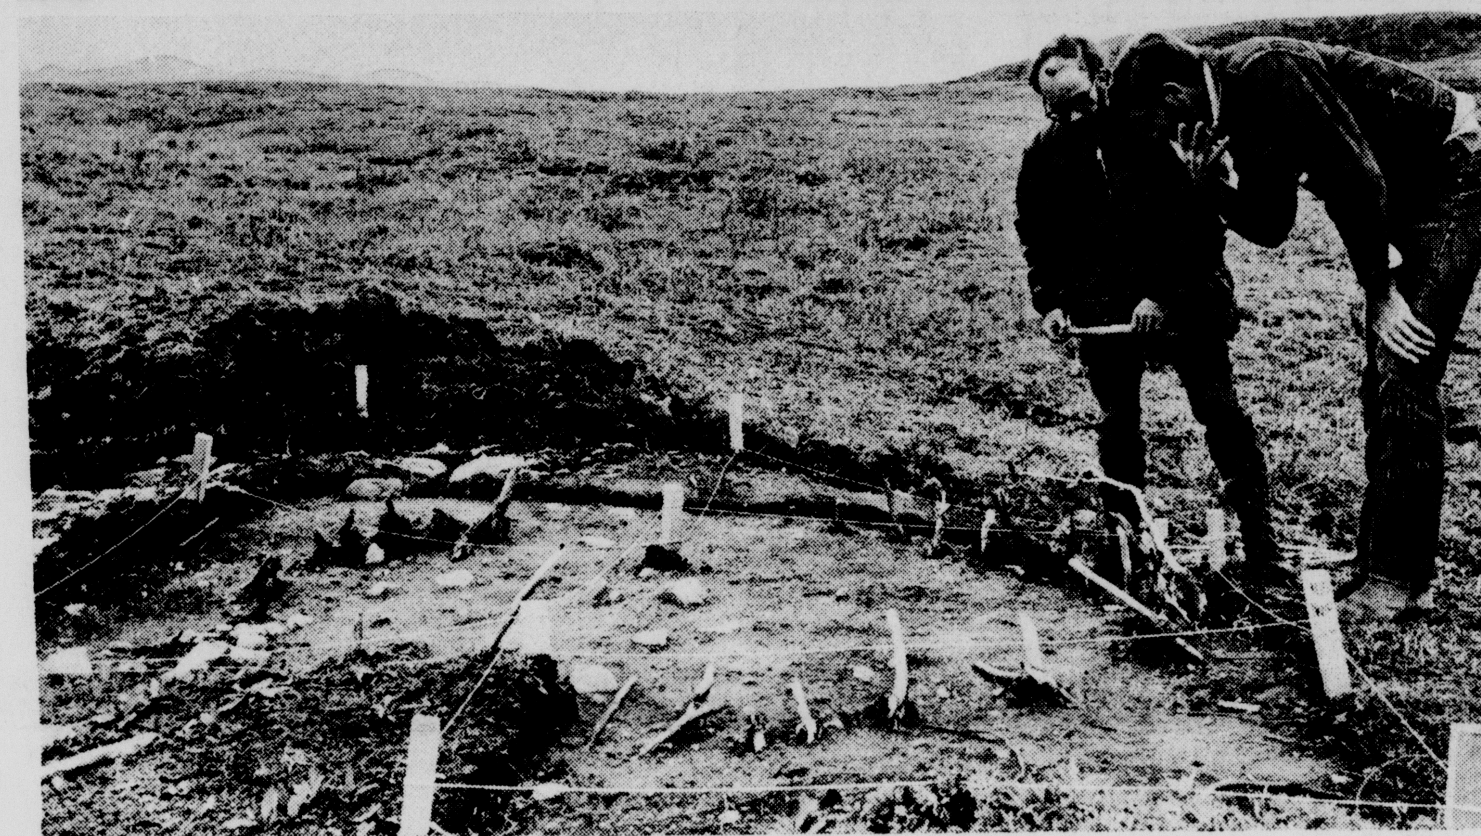

ST. LOUIS (AP) — General Bancshares Corp. of St. Louis has reported a five per cent increase in net income for the first half of 1972 compared with the same period a year earlier.

The firm said net income rose to $2,144,246, or 90 cents a share, from $2,055,366, or 86 cents a share.

General Bancshares also announced it has filed applications with the Missouri finance commissioner for construction of new banking facilities for two St. Louis banks. The firm owns six banks in the St. Louis area, including three in Illinois, and one bank in Memphis, Tenn.

Treasure Hunt

Since 1969, archaeologists have been digging into the vast Alaskan landscape in search of evidence of the migrations from Asia of the Western Hemisphere's first inhabitants. More than 10,000 artifacts so far turned up at 200 different sites indicate man passed this way 50 to 60 thousand years ago. Right, evidences of a prehistoric campsite are examined. Below left, Herb Alexander of the University of Alaska sorts and packages artifacts for shipment. Below right, native Alaskan Danny Hugo uncovers an ancient spear-point. Visitation Of Greg And Pete Learning Experience

By MRS. HUNTER ROLWING
Missourian Charleston correspondent

CHARLESTON — And then there were three. With the arrival of my nephews Greg, 8, and Pete, 5, our family increased from one vivacious 19-month-old son, Thomas, to three healthy live-wires.

The boys spent 10 days with us while their younger brother, John, 3, and sister, Missy, 19 months, stayed with aunts in New Madrid while their mother recuperated from major surgery. Their visit was a rewarding, demanding, memorable, and sometimes trying experience — but we miss them already.

En route home from New Madrid, Greg asked if we could visit Papoo's grave. Impressed with his desire to visit his maternal grandfather whom he had only known for three short years, I readily consented. As we entered the cemetery, Pete explained to me that Mamoo would lie next to Papoo when she died.

Together they commented on the natural beauty of the cemetery. Thinking that God could hear him better — and he was probably correct — Greg removed a giant piece of bubble gum from his mouth and placed in on top of a marker which he felt sure was "clean." Their simple prayers expressed innocent and beautiful thoughts of children. In the quietness of leaving, Pete spoke softly, "Let's see, Greg, who else do we know that lives out here?"

Shortly after we arrived home, all 25 children living around the circle knew two new boys were on the block. Jimmy, 6, was so thrilled with them being near his age that he wanted to stay at our house all the time. Being new on the block, Jimmy didn't know my name and couldn't tell his mother who he wanted to visit. In exasperation, he finally said, "It's the lady with the little boy next to Mrs. Pat and she's the new boys' grandmother." At 26, I would surely have set a "grandmother" record.

Freckle-faced with dark brown hair, big brown eyes, and an outgoing personality, Greg refused to play outside for the first few sunny days because "he didn't want any new freckles." Quieter, affectionate, and easy-going, Pete has light brown hair and brown eyes which Greg envies. Exceptionally well-mannered children, our main problem was preventing homesickness and combating "blocking out" deafness which occurs primarily in children when an unpleasant task is mentioned.

As the weekend approached, they became anxious about missing their allowance at home. To solve the problem, they decided to help me clean house to earn some money. Wanting some money but reluctant to work, Greg said he had never heard of visitors doing housework. He was told, "Well, there's a first time for everything, Greg, so let's get busy."

Had the governor seen their bedroom, he would undoubtedly have proclaimed it a disaster area. In the process of making their beds, they were caught testing the springs by jumping up and down on them. In reprimanding them, it was brought out that their mother didn't allow this to which Pete sincerely responded — "Yes ma'am, she does. Mama used to get on to us but she finally gave up."

The mention of money makes their eyes bulge and touching it sears a hole in their pockets. They consider their father, a bank manager, as "owner" of all the money. Whenever money gets short, carefree Pete says "Call my Daddy and have him bring some home."

After spotting the cotton trailers at my husband's business, Greg and Pete asked if they could clean them out. Thrilled with their employment status, they envisioned all the things they were going to buy with their earnings — over and over again. Confident that they could clean all 14 trailers out in a single afternoon, the inseparable brothers bounced out of the car bubbling with enthusiasm. One Coke, two john trips plus 30 minutes later, Greg yelled to an employee, "Let us know when 30 minutes are up. We're going to knock off for the day."

Neighbors asked the boys to attend a ball game with them that night. I told them to buy the people a soda since they were kind enough to invite them.

Looking at me incredulously, Greg asked in a tone of utter disbelief, "You mean we gotta buy it out of the money we earned?" I said yes and tried to impress upon them the importance of sharing what you have with others. They were also forbidden to buy any more gum. Here they come, laden down with all kinds of goodies. As I checked on their purchases, Pete pulled out a pack of gum. Sheepishly, he mumbled, "Oops, I accidentally bought it."

When questioned about the soda purchase, Greg popped off, "No, ma'am we didn't buy them one. I asked if them had some money and they said yes."

Our electricity went off the same afternoon during a rainstorm. Greg told me to "go get Mr. Marty (a neighbor employed by the Natural Gas Co.) He's the national gas preserver."

My husband took the boys to a western movie one night. Being movie and television addicts, the boys were very excited. Engrossed in the suspense of an anticipated charge, Pete shouted out "Go!" in the silence of a crisis scene. The large crowd of moviegoers burst with laughter to shatter the crisis.

Always busy with clowning around and fighting over who got to sit by Uncle Hunter, the boys usually neglected their food for awhile at meal time. Our huskie 33-pound son, Thomas, would invariably help himself to whatever he wanted off their plates. Pete caught him swiping his bread and promptly nicknamed him, Thomas, the Snitcher. He would always remind Greg to eat "what he wanted or Thomas would snitch it."

Like a bolt out of the blue one day, Greg stated "I wish my Papoo were still living, then I would have two grandfathers. All I've got now are my Mamoo, Pop Pop, and one false grandmother." Quite surprised by his terminology, I said "Oh no, honey, she's called your step-grandmother, not false one. That means she's not your real grandmother. Mom-Mom died before your Daddy and Mama got married."

Never having been separated from their family for any length of time, the boys talked about their parents and their return home the first few days. Reluctantly, they took part in all the surprise activities planned daily. On about the fourth day, they discovered that little boys (and girls) in other towns beside Memphis could be fun to play with too. They even found out that friendships could actually be formed away from home. From that point on, I had to track them down in their neighborhood. When their father called the following week, he was told their return would be postponed several more days "because we got a job ... and Jack has something to show us ... and can Aaron come live with us?"

Pete wanted to know if they had taken "that band-aid" off Mama. On homesickness, Greg told his father that "I tried so hard to cry yesterday but nothing would come out."

Dear Editor:
The strategy of a man courting a woman and a politician running for office is the same. They both promise anything until they achieve their objective and then they suddenly have a memory lapse. They remember everything else down to the smallest detail, but the part where they made the promises has slipped their minds and probably forever.

The voters and the lady in question both share the same plight, neither can get justice when they are the only ones who remember the details of the entire deal. The voters upheld their end of the deal by putting the politician in office and the lady certainly did her part and maybe more and now the big question is how to make these two scoundrels keep their word. Some voters have threatened to throw the rascal out and ladies have been known to haul the shyster into court but usually to no avail. they will never let it happen again and they don't until game a long time and the rules haven't changed, anytime we give something for a promise sounds so good we just we are likely to get skinned. After such an experience the voters and the lady are sure anything that wonderful, anyway this time it might be

LAKE OZARK — scale, efficient farming," stated T. R. McGuire president of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of St. Louis, when he spoke to approximately 300 officers and field personnel at the conference. He went on to state that "credit requirements, a major tool in today's farming operations, are expected to reach well over $100 billion by 1980.

Up to now the farmer has been faced, primarily, with the role of production. No longer is this true, according to James Mason, Riceland Foods, Stuttgart, Ark. "Farmers, through organization, will have to develop more dynamic marketing programs which, in turn, will mean more efficient procedures to get farm products to the consumer. Inefficiencies in the entire procedure of moving food from farm to consumer can no longer be tolerated," he said.

Mason also stressed the importance for the farmers to keep better records and the role of Production Credit Associations will need to play in this area of the farmer's business.

"Still another area that needs to be seriously considered," Mason maintained, "is joint ownership of equipment.

I'd be willing to bet you didn't know that July is National Hot Dog Month! Well? Now that you know it is, aren't you sorry you didn't start the celebration sooner? Seriously, even though frankfurters are not my favorite meat, a check with one local grocer revealed that hot dogs are one of THE most popular summer selections.

A probable number one on the list of reasons for their popularity is convenience -- in buying, storing, cooking and serving! And most kids love them!

I must admit to a lack of creativity on my part concerning hot dogs, but I do have two suggestions:

Add boiled, sliced franks to a pot of macaroni and cheese, garnish with paprika and bubble under the broiler for a minute. Do likewise to your favorite potato salad - hot or cold. Those are my only original contributions ... via my Mom.

Following are rules supplied by aforementioned council on hot dogs and a couple of recipes courtesy the "Favorite Recipes of Home Economics Teachers" cookbook.

The only other admission I'm going to make is that once I ate three footlong hotdogs during the last half of a football game ... with onions and coleslaw!

Have a good week ... j.g.

It's A Hot Dog Year At Convention

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — "We're eating hot dogs this year, not filet mignon," says Liz Carpenter, summing up the doldrums of the social circuit at the Democratic National Convention.

"It's a different spread," added Mrs. Carpenter, a White House aide in the Johnson administration and always a favored guest on the Washington social circuit.

It appears that the hoopla and parties which sparked past Democratic conventions are passe this year.

Some Democrats speculate this is caused by the style of the convention — the new breed of delegates whose tastes run more to dungeare and peanut butter than to cocktails and caviar. Others figure the question is purely financial — another manifestation of the party's $3.2-million debt.

"I looked for invitations and you know, there weren't any," said Mary Hoyt, press secretary for Mrs. George McGovern. "And if there were, what would people think? That we're down here to party?"

Mrs. Terry Sanford, wife of the former North Carolina governor seeking the Democratic presidential nomination, said her social calendar isn't as full as she'd expected.

"I thought maybe I wasn't being invited to the parties, but it seems there aren't many," she said. "Other years we've received lots of invitations to receptions and teas and things, but this year there doesn't seem to be much going on."

The fat-cats are here all right. Sometimes they can be seen cabana-hopping along the stretch of hotel beaches, but few are throwing extravagant black-tie parties.

In a convention week usually studded with fashion shows, teas and staid "ladies' functions," there was only one fashion show. Tickets went for a record low $3. And some went begging.

"These things used to be command performances," said Mrs. Gilbert Hahn of Washington, who did attend.

Novel of the Mind THE TERMINAL MAN. By Michael Crichton. Knopf. $6.95.

Remember that very popular, tense thriller, "The Andromeda Strain"? Crichton has come up with another one that is just as much of a nail-biter and goose-pimpler. On an entirely different subject, of course. Crichton's specialty is the suspense story grounded in actual biological or medical science.

The plot outline goes like this: A crew of brain surgeons at a research hospital, having so it will not stimulate him too experimented on monkeys, much. The surgeons choose a patient named Harry Benson.

"But now they're absolutely passe. It's delicious that this aspect is over. Four years ago this kind of thing would have been packed every day. Now who cares?"

Hotel beauty parlors say business isn't as usual, that the increase in women delegates hasn't helped their business one bit. Slacks, halters and sandals are in, as acceptable on the convention platform as they are on the beach. Waxen, coiffed hair-dos are out.

"I don't know what you call it, but I call it grim," said a Washington social writer who came to the convention to describe the party scene. "If it keeps up like this, I could go out of business."

thing known technically as psychomotor epilepsy. The patient has mental blackouts, during which he becomes murderously violent. But when he comes out of the seizure he remembers nothing.

Their procedure is to embed a tiny computer-like device in the patient's neck, which monitors his brain waves; when an attack is building up, the device gives him a mild electric shock that staves off the attack. But the device has to be monitored by the hospital's big computer so it will not stimulate him too much.

The surgeons choose a patient named Harry Benson.

Dowd Favors Greater Role For Culture, Arts

ST. LOUIS — "The arts are valuable in and of themselves. But a vigorous cultural life is an economic asset to a state as well," Edward L. Dowd, Democratic candidate for governor, declared in a statement released recently.

Dowd's statement, outlining his position on the relationship between the state government and the arts, follows:

"Missouri has a rich, proud cultural heritage. A few of her many sons and daughters who have made great contributions to literature, music and the fine arts are the beloved Mark Twain; the great poetess Marianne Moore; Scott Joplin, America's greatest ragtime composer; Thomas Hart Benton, a renowned painter who lives near Independence; and Grace Bumby, a fine opera singer from St. Louis. Popular and contemporary folk music, too, have been enriched by Missourians, like The Cardinals, John Hartford and Chuck Berry.

This cultural tradition is still alive today. All Missourians benefit from the great cultural facilities at our universities and colleges, in our urban centers, and throughout the state. A fine symphony orchestra, for instance, is a resource that enriches the lives of all Missourians. It delights and expands the minds of those who hear it, and is an example of disciplined dedication to excellence that throughout the state, to bring all of us can strive to follow.

I think our universities and Art. music and literature are activities that change our lives as Missourians as possible.

I would like to see the present work of the council better supported. State support must continue. Also, as governor, I would work hard to persuade all our great industrial and business establishments to give it significant assistance as many of them do already. I would also like the council, or a similar body, to study and make more Missourians aware of our rich folk-art heritage. This state is full of traditional and contemporary hearing and black folk musicians, folk-dancers, carvers and craftsmen. They could also provide a forum for statewide citizen input into the governmental process. Missourians need a cultural resource with this capability and I will support the full development of this resource.

I also believe Missouri should develop a mobile library program and should publicize more widely the State Library's mail programs, so that more of our rural citizens and older persons who cannot travel easily would have access to the resources of our state's great libraries.

Every year, millions of mature Americans travel long distances to hear our great orchestras, and to hear and see displays and performances by great folk artists. Missouri will benefit in more ways than one if the programs I have outlined are implemented.

We must not forget, as we concentrate this election year on the hard dollars and cents issues, that government ultimately is good only to the extent it frees us, the people, to develop ourselves, physically and mentally, to the limits of our human capacity. All too often, Missouri's leaders have overlooked this principle. It will always be uppermost in my mind."

Changes Announced

CHAFFEE - The Chaffee board of education has announced changes in school faculty.

Mrs. Esther Ryan, has resigned as school nurse. Mrs. Eleanor Bolton has been employed to teach junior high social studies. Mrs. Anne Henderson will be employed on a full-time basis and Mrs. Martha Dalton on a half-time basis in the business department, the board said.

At present, a vacancy exists in the music department and for a half-time nurse. The board is accepting applications for the two vacancies.

The board is accepting bids on cafeteria supplies, bread and milk; grease, oil and bus washing in the transportation department, and a new roof for the high school building.

All bids are to be sealed and submitted on or before July 14.

Morris Calls For United Rural Lobby

FULTON — Pointing to funds, the countryside is largely neglected," Morris said. He noted, "The Census Bureau defines a rural area as one with a population of 2,500 or less."

Morris pointed to the 44 per cent of Missouri's population that live in rural areas, and said, "Their needs for adequate medical and health facilities, water, sewage and telephone service are not receiving proportionate remedies."

Turning to educational opportunities for rural Missourians, Morris said Missouri has developed an excellent system of junior colleges in the past 10 years, and called for considering centrally located rural communities as sites for future rural aid programs gives evidence of rural neglect, Morris said.

The Democratic gubernatorial candidate told a luncheon of the Fulton Kiwanis Club, "Urban dwellers are familiar with the vocabulary of urban development — revenue sharing, small business loans, housing loans, pollution abatement. To Missouri's rural population, these concepts are often just words they read in the newspaper. Because, the fact is, when it comes time for government to distribute these colleges. He said, "For rural residents to take advantage of the benefits of these institutions — reasonable cost, specialized vocational training — these schools must be accessible to rural Missourians."

Morris concluded by urging the group to unite in efforts to assure that rural Missouri's needs are brought to the attention of state and federal governments.

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB Salt Reduction May Help

Hypertension Is a Symptom

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.
Dear Dr. Lamb—Is hypertension and high blood pressure the same thing? Is it a symptom or a disease? How is it too high? What could be the consequences of carrying a reading of 200/105 untreated for several months?

Dear Reader—Yes, hypertension and high blood pressure are the same thing. Tension refers to pressure and hyper, of course, means increased, hence increased pressure or high blood pressure.

A single elevated blood pressure reading should not be considered as a disease. It is a symptom. Single office readings like this may often represent merely the fat that he may have. For apprehension of the patient about his medical examination, specialists insist that readings need to be taken on different occasions. Some-times the patient's blood pressure will subside to plications of high blood normal levels after he is in the doctor's office for 30 minutes or an hour. Often doctors take the blood pressure at the beginning of the examination and at the end to find out if the patient's pressure has dropped.

As these remarks would suggest, elevated pressure is a symptom. Sometimes it's caused by a problem in circulation to the kidneys (these are rare cases). Some authorities have amassed a large number of cases that are associated with endocrine problems involving the adrenal glands that rest over the kidneys.

Many cases of elevated blood pressure will return to normal values if the person loses more than 10 percent of his excess body weight. This is a good heart that a person has true hypertension blood pressure should be less likely there will be fatty deposits in the arteries and the heart attacks will occur.

sure, including strokes and heart attacks, are related to the fatty deposits in the arteries. These deposits are increased in the presence of persistently elevated blood pressure.

Weight reduction decreases the amount of blood fat and prevents fatty deposits in the arteries and helps to prevent the complications of high blood pressure. Women, during their childbearing years, are less prone to have fatty deposits in their arteries than men. There is no absolute level of normal blood pressure but, in general, it should be more than 140/90 on repeated examinations over a period of time.

There is some evidence to suggest that the lower the blood pressure the less likely there will be fatty deposits in the arteries and the heart attacks will occur.

I can't tell you what kind of problem will result from

CLEAN WATER COMMISSION reported immediately. Residents of the area did not report it to a county conservation agent until several days later.

An unlikely connection was given when reporting a Clean Water Commission spokesman said: existing weather year-old Hengies, the conditions; name of the commission's emergency stream; location of the spill; pollution, is amount of material spilled; time of the spill; extent of the calls on the commission's damage; action taken at the month-old 24-hour telephone scene; and who was number for reporting responsible.

A bright yellow poster containing this information and the 24-hour telephone number has been distributed to the nine state agencies involved in the Missouri Pollution Plan, answering service to investigate the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and to California, Mo., 25 miles west about 1,000 industries in the of here. He arrived at the scene state.

Copies of the poster and the information concerning the minor accident and official commission regulations may be obtained by writing to the Missouri Clean Water under contract. However, had Commission, P.O. Box 164, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101.

In case of a major spill, Hengies said, he would go to the scene or send someone from the commission's staff. He also would notify the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency office in Kansas City, which would in turn notify local conservation agents. Other agencies that may be notified include the Missouri Division of Health, the Missouri Geological Survey and the Missouri Automobile Council.

"Sometimes you run up a big phone bill," Hengies said, "but it's worth it if you can combat a spill."

Hengies and an assistant were responsible for investigation these spills during the first six months of this year, but now the entire staff is involved, rotation on a weekly basis.

He said there were at least 50 spills so far this year, including at least eight reported in the month that the 24-hour telephone number has been in effect. Last year, 30 spills were reported to the commission's predecessor, the Missouri Water Pollution Board, and 20 spills were reported in 1969.

The present commission, in existence since April, has not been called upon to clean up any spills, Hengies said, but the Water Pollution Board was responsible for cleaning up a 1970 insecticide spill. State emergency funds were used in that operation.

The quick reporting of spills is vital, according to Hengies. A major fish kill in the south fork of the Salt River last spring might have been avoided had a leak from some fuel oil storage tanks been not treating a blood pressure of 200/105. It depends on what causes it and whether that's the persistent level of the blood pressure and the rest of the individual's medical status. I have frequently observed that with diet and adequate weight reduction many people develop normal pressure. Of course, if the person is already hypertensive, it's important to prevent the complications of high blood pressure. Women, during their childbearing years, are less prone to have fatty deposits in their arteries than men. There is no absolute level of normal blood pressure but, in general, it should be more than 140/90 on repeated examinations over a period of time.

There is some evidence to suggest that the lower the blood pressure the less likely there will be fatty deposits in the arteries and the heart attacks will occur.

I can't tell you what kind of problem will result from

CLEAN WATER COMMISSION reported immediately. Residents of the area did not report it to a county conservation agent until several days later.

An unlikely connection was given when reporting a Clean Water Commission spokesman said: existing weather year-old Hengies, the conditions; name of the commission's emergency stream; location of the spill; pollution, is amount of material spilled; time of the spill; extent of the calls on the commission's damage; action taken at the month-old 24-hour telephone scene; and who was number for reporting responsible.

A bright yellow poster containing this information and the 24-hour telephone number has been distributed to the nine state agencies involved in the Missouri Pollution Plan, answering service to investigate the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and to California, Mo., 25 miles west about 1,000 industries in the of here. He arrived at the scene state.

Copies of the poster and the information concerning the minor accident and official commission regulations may be obtained by writing to the Missouri Clean Water under contract. However, had Commission, P.O. Box 164, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101.

In case of a major spill, Hengies said, he would go to the scene or send someone from the commission's staff. He also would notify the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency office in Kansas City, which would in turn notify local conservation agents. Other agencies that may be notified include the Missouri Division of Health, the Missouri Geological Survey and the Missouri Automobile Council.

"Sometimes you run up a big phone bill," Hengies said, "but it's worth it if you can combat a spill."

Hengies and an assistant were responsible for investigation these spills during the first six months of this year, but now the entire staff is involved, rotation on a weekly basis.

He said there were at least 50 spills so far this year, including at least eight reported in the month that the 24-hour telephone number has been in effect. Last year, 30 spills were reported to the commission's predecessor, the Missouri Water Pollution Board, and 20 spills were reported in 1969.

The present commission, in existence since April, has not been called upon to clean up any spills, Hengies said, but the Water Pollution Board was responsible for cleaning up a 1970 insecticide spill. State emergency funds were used in that operation.

The quick reporting of spills is vital, according to Hengies. A major fish kill in the south fork of the Salt River last spring might have been avoided had a leak from some fuel oil storage tanks been
